31 Die in Missouri Traffic Accidents During Holiday

Toll Rises To 542

Belated reports of traffic deaths during the three-day Fourth of July weekend raised the national toll today to 542, a record for a three-day observance of the holiday.

Final figures were expected to raise the total killed during the 78-hour weekend even higher.

The previous record toll for a three-day Independence Day holiday was 504, set last year.

The count of traffic fatalities this year came close to the record for a four-day Independence observance, 557 in 1963.

The tally of traffic deaths began at 6 p.m. Friday and continued to midnight Monday.

This year's toll brought a stern warning from Howard Pyle, president of the National Safety Council.

"Never has driver improvement been more badly needed," Pyle said. "The attitudes and skills of too many drivers are failing to meet the exacting demands of billions of miles of high pressure travel.

"Every driver," Pyle said, "should being at once to sharpen old skills and develop a new ones through available driver improvements programs."

Another safety council spokesman estimated that the final toll would be about 550 traffic deaths. "More traffic fatalities may be counted during the final hours of the weekend," he said.

Boating accidents across the nation took 35 lives and 119 persons drowned in accidents not involving boats during the three-day weekend.

Six Perish In Mishaps, 31 Injured

Missouri recorded 31 traffic deaths over the July 4 holiday period.

Only California with 50, Ohio with 36 and New York with 33, recorded more deaths on their highways.

The count began at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at midnight Monday.

Three Farmington men were killed Monday when their car hit a utility pole on M32 east of Farmington. They were Cecil Ray Santoyo, 31, the driver; Harold Ray Dickey, 16, and Bruce Besher, 15.

Twenty seven persons were taken to the Pemiscot County hospital in Hayti on Saturday alone, the highway patrol reported.

There were six fatalities in four accidents in the Bootheel. Five were on Saturday. Thirty-one were injured.

James Hunsperger, 34, of St. Louis, formerly of East Prairie, died in an accident near Scott City at 5:30 a.m. Saturday. Dorothy Peterson, 30, Catron, Ronnie Burnham, 14, and Louise Burnham, 34, both of Marianna, Ark., died in an accident Saturday at 11:55 a.m. in an accident two miles south of Portageville. James Williams, 20, Cape Girardeau, lost his life in a motor scooter accident on Cape Rock Drive at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The sixth victim, Edna Rice, 31, Caruthersville, died in an accident at 2:10 p.m. Sunday, three miles south of Portageville on highway 61.

In the accident one-fourth of a mile south of Scott City on highway 61, a 1959 Buick driven by Frank Hunsperger, 37, St. Louis, ran off the road, struck a bridge, entered a ravine and caught fire.

James Hunsperger was a passenger. The driver received chest and face cuts. Others injured were Sam Irby, 25, St. Louis, internal injuries; Rayburn Williams, 27, East Prairie, fractured back and head injuries. The three injured were taken to the Southeast Missouri Hospital at Cape Girardeau.

The accident in which three persons were fatally injured occurred when a 1962 Ford driven by Louis Burnham, 36, Marianna, Ark., slid on the wet pavement, went into a ditch and turned over on its right side. Five were injured and taken to the Pemiscot county hospital in Hayti; the driver, who received internal injuries and a broken right thigh; Jerry Burnham, 10, Marianna, Ark., fractured right thigh and bruises; Brenda Burnham, 3, fractured right thigh and bruises; Doyle Burnham, 8, cuts and bruises; and Robert Peterson, 10, Catron, with a fractured right thigh and head injuries.

Williams was reported missing Sunday. Investigating Jim Payne, 31, found the body a half mile downstream from where the accident occurred when his vehicle slid off wet pavement after a rain Saturday.

In the accident Sunday south of Portageville Edna Rice was a passenger of a 1964 Rambler driven by Gilbert McCuthen, 28, Caruthersville. He is in the Pemiscot County Hospital, Hayti, with head and body injuries and reported in critical conditon. A 1955 trailer tractor, driven by Charles Flowers, Tampa, Fla., struck the Rambler after the Rambler had slowed down to make a turn and skidded into the path of the truck. The truck driver was not injured. The Rice woman was taken to the LaForge Funeral Home in Caruthersville.

There were 11 injuries in a single accident Saturday at 7:30 a.m. at Portageville, after a 1954 Buick driven by Danny Stoker, 18, Conway, Ark., stopped at a stop light. He was struck by a 1963 Mercury driven by Clarence Walker, 28, Chicago, Ill., and in turn the Mercury was struck by a 1964 Plymouth driven by Louistine Clark, 31, St. Louis, after which a fourth car, a 1962 Studebaker, driven by John Bethel, 24, Nappanee, Ind., ran into the rear of the Studebaker.

Resorts Plan To Get Tough With Rioters

Officials called today for tougher penalties and firmness in the wake of rioting and disturbances by beer-drinking, carousing youths in five resort towns over the Fourth of July weekend.

Mayor Wilson W. Finley of Geneva-on-the-Lake, Ohio, where nearly 300 young people were arrested, said he plans to draft new ordinances with higher penalties for disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

"What we need," said Finley, "is more and more enforcement. And we need higher fines."

The rioting at Geneva-on-the-Lake, on Lake Erie, and at Russells Point, Ohio, on Indian Lake in western Ohio, where some 100 persons were arrested, prompted Sen. Frank J. Lausche, D-Ohio, to issue the following statement:

"Only encouragement will be given future riots unless the prosecutors, the sheriffs and other law enforcement officials are given support by the judges. I do hope that the pleas advanced by lawyers and social workers that youth must be dealt with gently under the circumstances prevailing at these two resorts will not be given attention."

The rioters were mainly teenagers and college students.

Mayor Ben Saunders of Arnolds Park, Iowa, who handled close to 100 cases in mayor's court as a result of the weekend disturbances, said, "We'll be taking some precautionary measures."

Other trouble spots were Rockaway Beach, Mo., and Lake George, N.Y.

Sheriff Lyman Cardwell reported that "the situation is quiet at Rockaway Beach — all the kids have left."

Cardwell said he has devised a plan for preventing a recurrence but "I don't aim to publicize it at this time."

Slain On Way To Bath

CARUTHERSVILLE — Raphael Strawn, 25, has been charged with second degree murder by Pemiscott County Prosecuting Attorney Sharon Pate.

Strawn is charged with the fatal Saturday night shooting of John Bostic, 24, also of Caruthersville.

According to the prosecuting attorney, the shooting took place around 10 p.m. at the home of Strawn.

He said Strawn had admitted shooting Bostic with a .410 gauge shotgun when Bostic tried to get in the back door of Strawn's home.

He said Strawn had warned Bostic to get away from his house or he would shoot. Bostic refused and was shot through the glass door.

Pate said Bostic's wife and sister were in the car with him when he stopped in front of Strawn's house. They told Pate that Bostic had stopped to use the bathroom.

Absentee Ballots Ordered

Registered Sikeston voters who will be out of town July 27 for the special $1,200,000 bond election for water and sewage improvements were urged today to cast an absentee ballot by City Clerk John Vaughn. Votes may be cast any time until the day preceding the election, Vaughn said.

Bids will be taken today for the printing of about 100 absentee ballots, the clerk said, which will be available in his office later this month.

An absentee ballot may be voted in the clerk's office at the city administration building or mailed to the voter who requests a ballot. "Mailing the ballot is a little more trouble for the voter," Vaughn said, "because he must get his ballot notarized before mailing it back to us."

Any registered Sikeston voter is eligible to cast an absentee ballot.

Sophia Loren's Bigamy Trial Postponed

ROME AP -- Italy brought Academy Award winning actress Sophia Loren and movie producer Carlo Ponti to trial today in a Rome criminal court on bigamy charges.

The court formally opened the case and then, after a 30-minute session, granted the movie couple's request for a postponement. The next session was set for Oct. 21.

Neither Miss Loren nor Ponti were in court. They are doing film work outside Italy. Their attorneys represented them.

The accusation has pursued the pair since soon after their marriage by proxy at Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, in September 1957. It was her first marriage and his second.

Ponti, 51, first met Sophia in Rome in 1955, nine years after he married the daughter of an Italian general, Giuliana Fiastri, and set about gaining a reputation as a maker of movies.

Miss Loren was 20 then, a tall and shapely beauty whose real name was Sophia Scicolone.

Ponti became her mentor. Within two years they went to New York. Ponti got a Mexican divorce, then he and Sophia were married by proxy.

Divorce is illegal in Italy.

Heavy rains also pounded the mid-Atlantic and Southeast states.

A line of thunderstorms stretched from southwest Minnesota to the Texas Panhandle.

Brakes Applied To Criticism Of Prince

LONDON (AP) — Political observers see little chance of the House of Commons even debating a motion to warn Prince Philip to keep quiet on political issues.

Although the motion was signed by more than 30 Laborite legislators, leaders of both the Labor government and the Conservative opposition were reported anxious to let the matter drop.

The prince, husband of Queen Elizabeth II, has come under leftist criticism at home and African criticism in the Commonwealth for counseling restraint in the argument over Rhodesia's future.

Fail To Find Second Car

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — No trace has been found of a second car that witnesses said plunged into the Kansas River when the Kansas Avenue bridge here collapsed Friday.

Mayor Charles Wright ordered the three-day search called off Monday night. He said he would not ask the volunteer workers to continue the effort because of danger involved.

Kenneth Allen, 53, of Topeka died after he was trapped in his car when the bridge gave way.

Several witnesses said they saw a second car, an old model green sedan, slip into the river moments before Allen's car went in.

Workmen with heavy construction equipment, scuba divers and boat crews with grappling hooks spent 40 hours in the three-day hunt for the vehicle, believed to be in swift water about 100 feet from the south end of the bridge.

Mayor Wright said Civil Defense workers would continue to patrol the river banks downstream for several days, but no further probes would be made at the bridge site.

He proceeded then to deliver an old-fashioned history lesson. It spanned all 189 years of the country's history, from the day in July, 1776, when the Continental Congress passed its resolution to submit its statement of grievances, to the admission of Alaska and Hawaii as the 49th and 50th states.

IT'S A FACT

July 4th is justly celebrated as the date the Declaration of Independence was approved by the continental congress, even though the day on which the final separation was officially voted was July 2nd and the final signature was not affixed until 1777.

However, July 4th is notable for other reasons. To wit:

The U. S. Military Academy was formally opened in 1802.

Nathaniel Hawthorne, novelist and short-story writer, was born in North Salem, Massachusetts, in 1804.

Stephen Foster, America's first great composer of music, was born at Lawrenceville, Massachusetts, in 1826.

John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, second and third presidents of the U. S., both died on this date, fifty years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

The song "America" was first publicly sung by the children of Boston at a Fourth of July celebration in 1832.

Poet Walt Whitman published in Brooklyn, New York, the first edition of Leaves of Grass in 1855.

Calvin Coolidge, 30th president of the U. S., was born in Plymouth, Vermont, in 1872.

George M. Cohan, American composer, actor, and theatrical producer, was born in 1878.

General John J. Pershing placed a wreath on the grave of the Marquis de Lafayette in Paris in 1917, saying, "Lafayette, we are here."

AS GLORIOUS AS EVER

THE GLORIOUS Fourth, was just as glorious as ever.

And the beautiful Star Spangled Banner, always a special focus of Independence Day thoughts, waved just as proudly as it has in the past.

It can wave even more proudly, in fact: for our nation's increasing years have brought to our Flag constantly increasing cause for pride.

TRUE, THE ways of observing this birthday of our independence have changed. Gone is some of the boisterousness of other eras; the indiscriminate placing of loud and lethal fireworks in young hands has diminished; the riotous routs, for which the Fourth was only an excuse, have dwindled.

What remains means more than what we used to have. It contains more sincerity. The bands still play, and their airs are just as stirring as ever. The patriotic gatherings are still held. Audiences are still spellbound by speeches turned to the occasion.

Fourth of July picnics still are main events, whether they are colossal affairs prepared with tremendous effort in behalf of charity, or modest gatherings of families or groups of friends on relaxing outings.

WHATEVER FORM Sunday's observances were, there is a deep belief that there will be more realization of what is behind it all. That more minds will dwell on the greatness of our country, and on love for it.

In the past, just as now, there have been times when many Americans wondered if the United States was traveling the road to pride. In 1776 and the young years that followed there were strongly differing opinions about our course. During all our wars, and all our peacetime crises, there have been sincere, thoughtful citizens who were firmly convinced our country was headed for perdition.

BUT THE passage of time is a great analyzer. We know now that in the Revolutionary days, thanks to those true Americans who framed the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution and Bill of Rights, we got on the road to pride and stayed on it. In 1812, and in 1860, bitter as the schism was, we know now that our country took the right path.

In the war with Spain, the United States acted with humanity and justice. The first and second world wars, with all their dreadful carnage, brought further pride to our Flag because it never ceased to represent what was right.

Korea and its tragedies found us refusing to depart from the ways of national integrity -- always a cause for pride. Presently, Vietnam is an undermined situation, but we are clinging to the cause of proud principles.

There is no doubt that through the years more and more garlands of pride have been laid before the Stars and Stripes.

OUR COMMUNITY observed the 189th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. Dignity and patriotism in order.

The Flag was displayed at hundreds of our citizens' homes.

For the Fourth and our nation are as glorious as ever.

Our columnist Victor Riesel is about to take off for a series of news fronts which he believes need a new kind of coverage.

It was his behind-the-scenes reporting from Asia, Africa, Latin America and even in Europe which brought into the world spotlight the previously unnoticed men of real power who within a few months became international headline-makers.

Riesel digs them out by following his beat around the world. No coverage of American labor is complete without getting into the unreported news of international labor, or the new global unionism, or the U. S. labor leaders and contacts and activities abroad.

This is a new era for them. They spend millions of dollars on other continents. They have become the new jet set. They cooperate with "sister" unions in other lands and talk of international coordination on the industrial and strike fronts.

In many instances, men whom American labor has supported financially and politically have become ministers and leaders of the opposition parties. Many of these labor leaders today are in international diplomacy and are found frequently in the halls of the UN and Geneva "palaces."

Many, whom Riesel was the first to discover, have made grim headlines. In mid-August 1963, for example, after thousands of miles through Latin America, Riesel wound up in Santo Domingo and reported that the Dominican Republic was Fidel Castro's next target.

Your columnist warned then, long before any such reports came out of the island nation, that the world would soon learn that Communist cadres, built around labor action squads would move in that land. It happened.

During the trip, Riesel reported the activities of Juan Lechin in Bolivia and predicted that this miners' chief would lead a revolt. A few months ago, Lechin, with a labor army at his back, did just that.

Riesel was the first to report the infra-power structure of the Communist unions in Brazil. He predicted that this would be the base of a rebellion there. A year later, such a revolt started with a union hall as a headquarters. Fortunately it was put down by the present, pro-US. regime of President Branco.

Now Riesel is off for a labor reporting trip. This time with Santo Domingo in mind, Riesel will go deep into the smaller nations, the now obviously vital island republics, the "postage stamp countries" of the Caribbean and Central and Latin America. If any of these tiny lands ever are captured by Communist cadres, they would sound as loud as though they were a land mass the size of China.

In the tiny nations, control of the labor movements could mean control of the country. This story Riesel will seek out and report -- also the stores of labor - management cooperation against the Sino-Soviet - Castro operations.

To give Victor Riesel travel time and a chance to set up operations, some of the nation's most eminent leaders have agreed to answer with column - length statements vital questions put to them by Riesel.

Among these pinch - hitter "columnists" covering for Riesel are Secretary of Defense Robert A. McNamara; National Aeronautical and Space Administration Director James E. Webb; AFL- CIO President George Meany; Michigan's Governor George Romney; FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover; U. S. Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach; the world authority on cybernetics, John Diebold, who invented the word "automation"; W. P. Gullander, president of the National Assn. of Manufacturers; Dave Dubinsky, labor confidant of presidents, and Secy. of Commerce John Connor.

BIG PAD

The largest leaves in the world are those of the South American water lily known as the "Victoria Regia," named for Queen Victoria. The enormous floating pads may be almost forty feet around.

Colonel Hugh H. Waggoner, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, today urged boating enthusiasts to use great caution when towing their craft on the State's highways.

Colonel Waggoner said: "Many pleasure boats will be traveling on the highways. I urge their owners to take every precaution to avoid a traffic accident.

"The Missouri Boat Commission has advised us that at the present time there are more than 57,000 boats registered in Missouri. They are constantly being towed to lakes or streams. I would like to remind motorists that any time a trailer of any description is in tow, they should use extra traffic caution."

Colonel Waggoner pointed out some of the Missouri Traffic Regulations regarding trailers hitched to automobiles. He said: "Missouri Traffic Regulations require that trailers have one red tail lamp visible 500 feet to the rear of the vehicle and one white lamp illuminating the license plate visible 50 feet to the rear."

The Patrol Superintendent also stated that an outside rear view mirror is required if the operator cannot see the road behind the trailer from inside the towing vehicle.

"The week of July 4 has been proclaimed National Safe Boating Week in Missouri by Governor Warren Hearnes," Colonel Waggoner concluded. "During this week and the rest of the summer, many watercraft will see service on our lakes and streams. I urge motorists to be alert of these towed boats on the highways. I also wish the owners of the crafts clear and safe sailing on the waterways."

DA NANG, South Viet Nam AP -- It all happened in 16 terrible minutes.

In that incredible fraction of an hour, a U. S. Air Force pilot napalm-bombed a target, his plane caught fire, he bailed out, landed in enemy territory and was plucked to safety by a passing Army helicopter.

"That's the only real emergency I've had in more than 4,000 hours in the air," said Capt. Edward F. Gallardo, 33, of Armstrong Creek, Wis.

"I feel much safer flying a jet plane than I do driving an automobile."

Ed is a dark-haired, F100 pilot who stands 5 feet 5, and weighs only 137 pounds. His wife, Pat, and their five children -- none of whom is more than 5 years old--live in Hampton, Va.

The fighter pilot's battle ordeal came on a recent Sunday when he had to skip morning religious services because of an early mission.

The mission was his 35th in some 40 days.

"I was first of our flight in on the target, some Viet Cong emplacements 42 miles south of here," said Gallardo. "I came in fast at 50 to 100 feet above the ground.

"I pushed what we call the pickle button to release the napalm cans. Immediately there was a loud explsion, and the cockpit filled with smoke. I didn't know whether I had been hit by ground fire, or something had gone wrong with the napalm.

"But I couldn't see out. My plane was on fire."

Instinctively, he put the plane into a climb.

"The smoke began to clear, but my plane was burning badly. I didn't know whether it would blow up or not. But you don't bail out over a target area if you can help it, and I headed toward the sea.

"I got up to 5,000 feet. At 6,000 feet the speed began to bleed down. The plane started to roll. The controls had burned away. I had become just a passenger, I had to go."

The captain jettisoned his canopy, pulled his triggers and was ejected.

"There was a big blast, and the next thing I knew I was floating down about 12 miles from the target area. It was a great view and I had plenty of time to think, but all I thought about was landing in a clear space."

Gallardo landed standing up between two houses in a native hamlet.

"I hit about 20 feet from a small boy," he said. "His eyes got big, he made a 180-degree turn and ran. I ran in the opposite direction toward a rice paddy, scattering dogs and chickens. I could be picked up there, but hide in the shrubbery around it if necessary."

Five planes circled protectively around his position and a pararescue team scrambled at the base here to get him. But an Army helicopter crew, apprised of his plight, picked him up.

"I wasn't on the ground more than five minutes," said the captain.

That afternoon at 5 o'clock the captain knelt at Mass in a chapel here.

Usually a cruise ship going to Iceland, India, South Africa, or around the world, announces a sailing date six months to a year, or even two years, before sailing. A schedule of calls is fixed, including a dozen or more shore excursions, and a price is put on each cabin and excursion.

Tourist cruises, which mean inexpensive cruises, are sold out two years in advance. People book luxury cruises six months ahead and women book dates with hairdressers aboard two months ahead. Table reservations are wangled long before sailing, as are the location of deck chairs. An innocent latecomer is apt to find himself a bit helpless.

For an advertiser to claim that everybody likes his product or that it is 100 percent pure is not so believable as to say that 95 percent prefer it or that it is 99.44 percent pure.

Since we are always more interested in exceptions, we often wish we could be told what are the impurities, and who, specifically, are the disgruntled ladies who are thumbs-down on the new detergent. Are they the type who are against all progress? Do they bake their own bread, despise permanent waves, wear bone corsets, and scrub their faces with ordinary soap and water? Or are they the few who just plain refuse to be interviewed?

A man said that 6,000,000 women had stretched their forms on the tables in his beauty salons. We checked up, and it turned out that maybe 500,000 women had taken an average of twelve treatments. He counted each customer twelve times, a common practice among statisticians.

A BACK-PAT TO THE TEENS

Hail to the PROM SET -- The delightfully-wholesome couples who "do the town" at this time of each year. In an era marked by Beatles, Herman's Hermits and all other less-than-conventionally attired young people, it's a joy to see the lovely lasses in their first formals and their handsome escorts in spotless white dinner jackets. It can also be noted that the comportment of these young people is exemplary. If this practice of good-grooming leads to good manners -- and many people believe that the two go hand in hand -- then it's just too bad that the "Prom Set" doesn't have many, many more members, and that the "Prom Season" doesn't last much, much longer!

WRONG TURN

The guy took his doll to an open - air play one summer evening and during the first act found it necessary to excuse himself. He asked the usher where the men's room was located and was told to "turn left by that big oak tree then right for 20 yards."

Some time later he returned to his seat.

"Is the second act over?" he asked the doll.

"You should know," she said blushingly, "You were in it!"

Doc. Duncan Says

This proposed gun law in effect would hold the lawabiding citizens arms while two or more reds beat him up and robbed him, while the constitution with no ands or buts says The right to bear arms shall not be questioned. We can all see the difficulty and danger of law officers, but with the records now kept, the law could crack down on known crimnals that there would be few to take the chance with firearms. When and if this law takes effect, 10 per cent of our population as police would be too few to protect unarmed citizens.

H. L. Hunt Says

CIVIL SERVICE

The time has come to begin asking searching questions about an institution in our government often regarded as automatically "a good thing": the civil service system.

The civil service system was established more than three quarters of a century ago when, comparatively speaking, our government was a minnow in relation to the great whale it has since become. The making of government policy in those far-off days was a task a very small number of people could perform. The somewhat larger number who carried out the policies had nothing to do with making them, and there was no reason why they should not be kept permanently on the job.

But today, professional civil servants fill many vital policy-making positions in Washington. They staff the "middle echelon" of the State Department and related agencies where vital decisions are made concerning our nation's safety. They regulate many of the nation's businesses. They gather statistics on which our whole national economic policy is based.

Holding critical positions, hostile civil servants can effectively undermine any policy they dislike while effectively promoting policies they do like, regardless of the wishes of their appointed superiors. Yet under civil service regulations, it is almost impossible to remove even the most obstructive.

Serious consideration should be given to removing the nearly absolute guarantee of job security from those whose job involves the nation's security, and replacing it with a more flexible system which will insure that our policies are faithfully carried out.

For competent, faithful service, our civil servants deserve just compensation, but not a "right" to unending support by the taxpayers regardless of performance. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Now that open fighting between Americans and Viet Cong has been decided on, Gen. William Westmoreland, U.S. commander in South Viet Nam, has urged the Pentagon to clarify who should be in command of the American troops on the battlefield.

The Americans have been sent to South Viet Nam to backstop the South Vietnamese, not command them. And Vietnamese officers will be offended if an American is placed in command over them. But Gen. Westmoreland also doesn't like the idea of leaving the fate of thousands of American GI's in the hands of less experienced South Vietnamese officers.

He wants a unified command under his control, even though it's a political affront to the South Vietnamese. Westmoreland is hopeful that some way can be worked out to keep American troops under U.S. command wherever they go into action. Partial command would be impractical, however, in a major battle, for whoever is directing a battle must have direct authority over all the troops.

Meanwhile the latest intelligence reports identify nine North Vietnamese battalions operating inside South Viet Nam. The buildup is so formidable that major battles could be launched at any time.

Some military advisers have recommended pulling all troops out of the remote guerrilla-controlled areas. This would shorten our supply lines and save isolated outposts from being overrun.

However, such withdrawal might be interpreted as weakness and seriously injure South Vietnamese morale.

—SON OF BOXING—

What does a young man do when he's the son of a famous heavyweight boxing champion and is elected to Congress? That is the question being asked about John Tunney, son of "Gentleman Gene" Tunney, who defeated Jack Dempsey to become world champion on Sept. 26, 1926.

Gene Tunney, whose home is in Connecticut, was a Republican. His son John, who represents the arid tip of Southern California, is a Democrat. The elder Tunney, however, switched last November to go all out for the Democrats — and his son.

This week young Tunney is doing what might be expected of a son of boxing and is holding hearings on a bill to clean up that sport. He proposes establishing a national boxing commission so that championship matches cannot be shopped around from state to state as the Liston-Clay fight was shopped from Miami to Boston, to Maine because other state commissions would not license it. A national boxing commission would prevent this, also ban boxers with ties in the underworld.

Young Congressman John Tunney has not stopped with legislation on boxing. He is pushing a national minimum wage of $1.25 for agricultural workers, despite opposition of the big Southern California ranchers; is urging improved living conditions for migrant workers and recently got $120,000 for bettering them in the Coachella Valley.

Tunney also proposes including hospital employees in the new Social Security bill, is plugging to keep $1,600,000 in the budget to build reservoirs in the Imperial Valley so that when farmers order water for irrigation purposes and on top of this it rains, they can impound their surplus water, not turn it loose in the desert.

—UNWANTED COLLEGE—

Most cities are delighted to be the home of a college. But Cape May, N.J., is battling to oust Shelton College, an institution of dubious learning founded by rabble-rousing Rev. Carl McIntire, the defrocked ex-Presbyterian minister.

The city council of Cape May and Mayor Frank Gauvry have voted to oust the college. However, Rev. McIntire has flatly refused to move it.

Recently McIntire wrote a letter to Mayor Gauvry inviting him to greet Sen. Strom Thurmond, the South Carolina Dixiecrat, "at a patriotic rally under our auspices. . .for individual freedom."

"In our controversy with you concerning Shelton College," said Rev. McIntire, "you said you did not approve of such speakers as the Senator when he was mentioned by name as coming to Cape May. We are especially desirous that you have this opportunity to meet this distinguished U.S. Senator and great Amgerican and also that in your capacity as a civic spokesman you greet the Senator.

"It will be conducive for better understanding and appreciation of the liberties which we enjoy as Americans," wrote McIntire.

Mayor Gauvry declined.

Meanwhile Shelton College is housed in the Christian Admiral Hotel, owned by McIntire, where he continues to be a thorn in the flesh of the city council.

Cape May authorities met with college authorities, asked if they intended to continue bringing such speakers as Gen. Edwin Walker, who retired from the Army after a squabble involving the teaching of John Birch literature to troops, and Sen. Thurmond. The college stated that it did so intend.

The institution has only one hundred students. Indications are that its accreditation will not be renewed. The Cape May city council has denied it rezoning, and the New Jersey Supreme Court has upheld the city.

Shelton College is now under orders to vacate the hotel by September, 1966. The city fathers of Cape May are anxious for education but not of this variety.

—UNDERGROUND WIRING—

A White House panel, headed by Walker Cisler of Detroit-Edison, has urged more underground electric wiring as part of the President's program to beautify America.

The panel commended progress in Los Angeles, where all electric utility service in new suburban areas is scheduled to be underground by the early 1970's.

However, due to the excessive costs of underground transmission, White House consultants suggest that above-ground electric wiring can be blended into surroundings in order to preserve natural beauty.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Reuther Moving to Train Nation's Poor for Action.

Washington, D. C.: -- In olden days when one's grandmother, newly arrived on these shores, sought for an expression of futility, she'd shrug her shoulders and in her best American-ese say: "You can't fight City Hall."

She was poor then. City Hall was the castle on the mountaintop. But the poor are different today. They are fighting city hall -- all over the land. They are well organized. They are a new social force.

Though still unnoticed, theirs is a social revolution, a challenge to the local "establishment" and to the old-line political leaders and, yes indeed, soon a challenge to America's labor leadership as well.

Those in the "Poverty" headquarters of Sargent Shriver here see it clearly.

So does the president Walt Reuther.

They see it coming not so much because of the distribution of millions of dollars to millions of people in seething tenement districts.

They see it, rather, as a result of the organization and training of the poor for leadership in the slum - jammed precincts of the nation's great cities.

Out of this will come an inner infra - structure of political strength which will be in the hands of proletarians still unknown.

There is much to "support the thesis that there is something of a social revolution in the making," one of Sargent Shriver's Office of Economic Opportunity highly - placed colleagues said to a friend the other day, "which has its implications for the 'local establishments' and, indeed, for labor organizations too."

He pointed out that his chief, Sargent Shriver, also refers to the development as a "social revolution," and noted that even the most liberal of mayors are disturbed by the poor's challenge to their City Hall power.

"This arises first out of the requirement in the Economic Opportunity Act that there be '. . . maximum feasible participation of residents of the areas and members of the corporations served' in community action program to eliminate poverty," he explained. "Therefore, the poor are re-enfranchised and are beginning to speak for themselves to constitute another voice to be reckoned with in civic affairs.

"It may well be that those of the poor who are being paid to help administer some of the anti - poverty programs will throw up from their ranks new leaders of a segment of our population -- the poor -- which totals 34.6 million throughout the nation."

Already there are some 45,000 paid poor involved in Project Head - Start alone. This is the eight-week summer training program for poor children who will enter school this fall.

There are more than 30,000 additional poor who will be paid employes of other community action programs by summer's end.

And this is just the beginning. Several hundred thousand more poor will be hired to work for and administer anti-poverty programs street by street, community by community.

On each local Community Action Agency's governing board there will be an average of 10 poor as policy-makers. These will total in the thousands eventually. They will be elected in their precincts. They, not the clubhouse leader, will become the poor's advocates -- at city hall and, soon, inside the labor movement.

Reuther has moved to meet this social challenge by joining with the challengers. Under his leadership and with a grant of auto union funds, he has launched the Citizens' Crusade Against Poverty. It now has a Washington headquarters and in August it will have a full time director.

Reuther's theme was struck in a recent statement. Characteristically, he said: "Plans for developing leadership potentials among the poor are based on the already demonstrated capacity of the poverty-stricken to take active roles in the development and carrying out of programs.

"Leadership training programs will train people in organizational techniques and give them a knowledge of community structure and resources so that they may more effectively press for needed action whether it is in the field of housing, education, welfare administration or other matters of concern."

Grandmother would never recognize city hall today. Everywhere, it is coming down the mountainside.

Briles Picks Up First Win In Star Performance

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The St. Louis Cardinals edged San Francisco, 3-2, Monday as the Redbirds stretched their winning streak to six.

St. Louis moved to within two games of the break-even mark with the victory. They are 39-41 for the season and are in seventh place in the National League.

Curt Flood banged a single to centerfield to score Phil Gagliano with the winning run in the 12th inning. Gagliano opened the 12th with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice. After Lou Brock was walked intentionally, Flood broke up the game.

Nelson Briles, who put the Giants down in order in their half of the 12th, got the victory for one inning of relief. Briles was the third reliefer used by St. Louis. Ray Washburn started for the Cardinals but was removed for a pinch hitter after seven innings.

Juan Marichal 13-6 starts for San Francisco tonight at St. Louis. Curt Simmons 4-8 will pitch for the Cardinals.

Kansas City lost to the Baltimore Orioles 7-4 Monday night at Kansas City after a 7-13 relief pitching gem by Robin Roberts of Baltimore. Roberts replaced Dave McNally with two out in the first after the Athletcs scored three runs and held the a's scoreless until the seventh when an unearned run scored on his throwing error.

A double by Jim Landis, a sacrifice fly by Ken Harrelson and Tom Reynold's single gave the A's their three runs in the first.

Steve Barber 6-6 will be on the mound tonight for the Orioles at Kansas City. Jim Hunter 0-1 will start for the Athletics.

Bertrand Stops Scott City, In 4 to 3 Thriller

Bertrand's Connie Mackers picked up their second win in a row, picking off a tough Scott City team, with a 4 to 3 victory.

Bertrand pitcher Brooks and Sexton limited the Scott City team to 7 hits in the contest. Sexton did an excellent job of relief pitching. He came in in the third inning, with the bases loaded and one man out. He retired the next two hitters, to snuff a Scott City rally.

Brunderman and Alcorn took care of the power-hitting for Bertrand. Brunderman banged a triple, while centerfielder Alcorn poked a third inning double.

Ulmer and D. McSwain took care of the pitching chores for Scott City. Pete Ulmer was the losing pitcher. The two Scott City hurlers limited Bertrand to only five hits in the game.

Bertrand and Scott City are slated to tangle again Thursday night, on Bertrand's home diamond.

Braves Handed Problems By Astros

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Everything is going wrong for Milwaukee's slumping Braves these days. Now cleanup hitters are beating them with squeeze bunts.

The Houston Astros pulled a rare bit of strategy by having big Walt Bond bunt over a tie-breaking run in the ninth inning for a 5-4 victory over the Braves Monday night.

"We're just snake bit, losing every way possible," All-Star catcher Joe Torre said after the Braves' ninth defeat in the last 11 games. "Every mistake, even a walk, costs us a run."

Held to three hits for seven innings by Dick Farrell, the Braves exploded to tie the count with the help of a two-run homer by Torre, his 17th, and a solo blast by Hank Aaron. The homer was Aaron's 14th of the year and No. 380 of his career.

Then Houston Manager Lum Harris crossed up the Braves, who failed again in an effort to put together two straight victories for the first time since June 13.

Police Edges First National

Little League action got under way after the big weekend with an extra inning ballgame between Canvas Products and Leslie Insurance.

Neither team had any action until the top of the last when Canvas went on to score 3 runs. Leslie, needing 3 runs to tie the game and 4 to win, pounded the ball 3 times to manage enough runs to win the game.

Rofkahr, with aid from Wake, took to victory giving up 7 hits and 12 runs. Sipult, pitching the last three frames for Canvas, took the loss. He had starting help from Stewart and McDowell.

Wounded Meet At St. Andrews For British Open

SOUTHPORT, England AP -- The word went out today among the ranks of the world's greatest golfers:

"Watch out for the walking wounded. They'll beat you."

A half dozen of the top stars in the field of 130 that has gathered for the British Open are complaining of health problems of one sort or another.

Arnold Palmer, who won the Open on Royal Birkdale's 7,037-yard par 73 course four years ago, wore a turtle neck sweater against chill winds which might further damage a sore throat he has been bothered with for several dys.

Bruce Devlin of Australia had such a bad throat he even had it X-rayed in case there was some foreign body lodged there. It wasn't.

Kel Nagle, fellow Australian who was runner-up in the U.S. Open this year and won the British Crown at St. Andrews in 1960, had a sore back.

So did Bob Charles of New Zealand, the 1963 champion.

The Birkdale Club lined up a local physiotherapist to tend them.

Defending champion Tony Lema of San Leandro, Calif., breezed in Monday, back to his playing weight of 175 after he started smoking again to reduce from 195.

But Lema recalled a stomach upset he had last year in England and said "I hope that doesn't show up again."

Gary Player, the little South African who won the American was pleased that the winds were blowing in off the Irish Sea.

"My hay fever, you know," he said.

Everyboey in the star studded field seemed able and willing to have something wrong with them, except Jack Nicklaus, who is the 3-1 favorite to win his first British Open, the only major championship that has eluded the Golden Bear.

"I'm fine," he said with a big smile. "And I'm desperate to win this one."

In his tuneups for the 72 hole medal play which starts Wednesday and ends Friday, Nicklaus had a special look at the 468 yard par-4 sixth hole.

"It's the worst hole," he said. "It's all right for power hitters like myself, Palmer and some others and I can play it. But it must be powered."

Lions Drop Legion In N. L. Bout

In the National League last night at Puckett Field, Lions belted Legion with a score of 7-1. Lions crossed the plate 7 times off their 10 hits of the night. Legion pounded the ball 3 times, two of which were by the third baseman, Reynolds.

Lions did not score in the first, but in the second they pounded six hits to produce six runs. They led with that score until the fourth when Legion scored one and Lions scored another to bring the total score to 7-1.

Every player for Lions exept two had at least one hit for his times at bat. Culbertson had 2 for 3, one of the hits being a home run. Hailey and Smith helped the hitting field with 2 hits each for the victors. Britt had the other hit for Legion to make their total 3.

Vaught led Lions all the way allowing only two players to connect with hits. He gave up only one run. Howard pitched five frames to take the loss, and had one inning of relief from Allen.

Swoboda Slugs For Mets

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Swoboda has a Chinese step-grandfather but there's nothing Oriental about his home runs.

When the New York Mets' slugging outfielder gets good wood on a pitch there's little doubt about the ball's destination. None of those cheap home runs — sometimes called Chinese homers — for him.

The Baltimore native crashed a couple on the nose Monday and in both instances the Chicago outfielders didn't even bother to turn around.

Swoboda hit his first homer in the first inning of the opener, off southpaw Dick Ellsworth. There were two on base and that was all the Mets needed to win 3-2.

The 21-year-old homered again his first time at bat in the nightcap. This one came off right-hander Bill Faul with Ed Kranepool on base and started the Mets to a 3-0 victory.

The homers were No. 14 and 15 for Swoboda, who bettered the club's record for a rookie, 13 by Jim Hickman in 1962.

Although he had driven in five of the Mets' six runs, Swoboda was slightly annoyed at being lifted for defensive purposes in the late innings of each game.

"He doesn't want to come out," said Manager Casey Stengel. "You got to yell at him a couple of times."

Lopez Picks Three Yanks On A.L. Squad

BOSTON AP -- Three Minnesota Twins and three New York Yankees were among nine picked for the 1965 American League All-Star team Tuesday by Manager Al Lopez of Chicago.

The Yankees, shut out in the balloting for the starters in the annual All-Star clash at Minnesota July 13, will be represented by catcher Elston Howard, second baseman Bobby Richardson and outfielder Mickey Mantle.

This was the 14th All-Star selection for the ailing Mantle, making him the senior on the team announced by American League headquarters.

Chosen to join Minnesota's Earl Battey, the starting catcher selected in a poll of Al players, coaches and managers, were shortstop Zoilo Versalles, first baseman Harmon Killebrew and outfielder Jimmy Hall.

Also named by Lopez were third baseman Max Alvis of Cleveland and outfielders Al Kaline of Detroit and Carl Yastrzemski of Boston.

As the All-Star manager, Lopez must also name the pitching corps -- to be announced Friday.

Lopez followed the choices of the poll, and all those named were runners-up in the balloting, except Mantle.

Since all 10 AL teams must be represented on the All-Star squad, Lopez must select pitchers from Kansas City, Washington and Los Angeles among his eight choices.

FIRE FABLE

When man first learned the use of fire,
He experimented, and found
He was warmer, his home was drier,
His meat was tasty when golden brown.
He moved his fire into the shelter,
And soon had a fireplace;
So, after the invention of this melter
He became a civilized race.
All that happened in one million B. C.,
But now a strange evolution we're going through;
He's taking the fire back outside,
And calling it barbecue.

Sikeston Aces Cope Tournament Win

Sikeston's 12 team Babe Ruth Tournament got under way last night with some spirited action.

In the first contest Sikeston's Aces outfought a stubborn Brosley nine, to cope a 7 to 3 victory.

The Aces banged out only five hits in the game, but were aided by Broseley's erratic fielding, 4 errors, in winning the first round contest.

Pitcher Steve Counts held the Broseley team to only 3 hits in the game. Sikeston made five errors in the game.

Rick McDonald, Ace shortstop, paced Sikeston in hitting. McDonald had two safeties in the game. Charley Dye, Arnold Stewart and Jim Newman had the other Sikeston hits.

A MODERN ELECTRONIC ENGINE PERFORMANCE ANALYSIS
IS LIKE A DOCTOR'S X-RAY

When you go to your Doctor for a checkup, he usually insists on an X-ray, to determine the exact condition of the vital organs that control body processes.
An electronic diagnosis of your engine and its electrical system is like an X-ray in that it determines the exact condition of each part and component that controls car performance.
Many vital engine parts are out of sight. It is impossible, for example, to see the action of the distributor points under actual working conditions. However, with our modern Rotunda Electronic Diagnosis Equipment, the exact condition of all such hidden parts is clearly indicated on the oscilloscope screen. Nothing is left to guesswork — nothing is overlooked.
Let our trained diagnosis technicians give you a complete report on every phase of your engine's performance. It will pay big dividends in helping you to avoid future trouble.

Five Die In Bus Car-Crash

WATERLOO, N.Y. (AP)—An eastbound Greyhound bus and an automobile collided on the New York Thruway today, killing five persons in the car and injuring 35 to 40 on the bus.

The bus passengers were not reported seriously injured.

One bus was bound for Boston, either from Cleveland or Chicago and had stopped in Rochester.

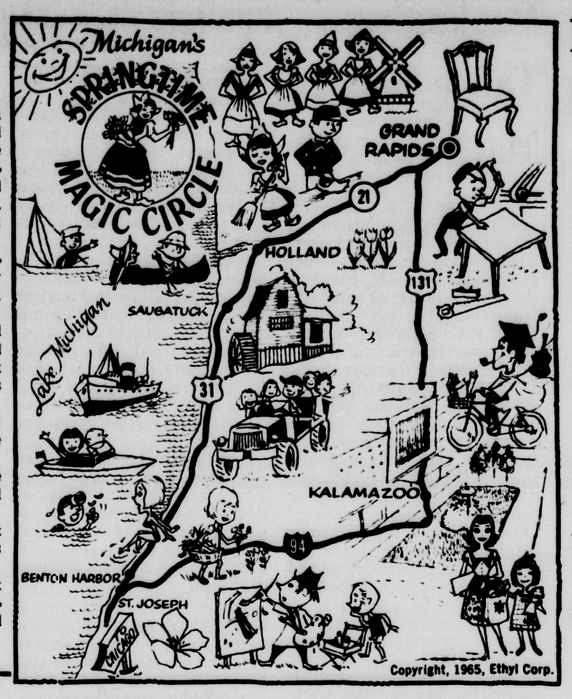

Reporters at the scene said the westbound car had crossed the center mall of the rain-slick superhighway and hit the bus head-on.

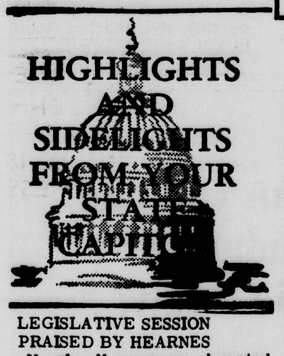

The bus careened into a small ravine and fire broke out in the rear.

The car disintegrated in the passing lane on the eastbound side.

The impact ripped the left side of the bus, and baggage was strewn over the highway.

The accident occurred about two miles west of this community between Rochester and Syracuse.

From blossoms to beaches, there is no place quite like southwestern Michigan in springtime. Twin cities Benton Harbor and St. Joseph, in the heart of the rich fruit belt, each year hold a gala Blossom Festival complete with queens and grand parade.

The Magic Circle route north along the shoreline offers glimpses of high wooded cliffs that shelter long stretches of sandy beaches. Popular is the old resort town of Saugatuck for antique shops, a picturesque waterfront, summer stock theater, and exciting roller-coaster rides over the giant sand hills in dune schooners.

Springtime in Holland is fittingly gay with some two million tulips in bloom. Settled by Dutch immigrants, remnants of the original "kolonie" are on display in the Netherlands Museum. At the Wooden Shoe Factory you can be fitted with a pair of klompen—some 20,000 pairs fashioned by hand are turned out annually.

Grand Rapids, furniture capital and regional shopping center, boasts a fine furniture museum portraying the craft that made the city famous, plus many parks and Indian burial mounds. A new superhighway leads south to Kalamazoo, whose park-like Burdick Mall for pedestrians has put new life into the downtown business area with fountains, flowers, grass, and soft recorded music.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION PRAISED BY HEARNES

Nearly all programs advocated by Governor Warren E. Hearnes before the 43rd General Assembly back in January swept through the recently ended session which saw the assembly heaped with praise from Missouri's youthful governor.

In fact, the governor made the unprecedented move of appearing before both chambers in the final moments of the session to praise legislators personally for their efforts over the past six months.

REAPPORTIONMENT

Even before the legislature met in January, there were signs and even open discussion of the fact that little could be expected from this session because of the squabble that would arise over court-ordered reapportionment and redistricting.

However, despite heated debate and lengthy oratory, both were finally accomplished, but it will be some time before it's known whether the plans brought out by the legislature will suit federal authority.

The size of the house is to be increased to 168 members if the voters approve a constitutional change August 17. At the same election, voters also will be balloting on the proposal possibly most dear to Hearnes' heart, gubernatorial succession; and a measure to allow communities to sell property financed under bonds after such bonds are retired.

CIVIL RIGHTS

In the area of Civil Rights, programs advocated by the governor to place Missouri in line with federal statutes were accepted. Also, another point was to strengthen the present Commission on Human Rights through budgetary means.

Heretofore, the commission had been saddled with an extremely low budget which allowed for hardly any action. This budget now has been doubled and the staff, in anticipation of the large increase, already has been upped considerably.

A new public accommodations law which deals with racial discrimination in nearly all phases of public commerce (except beauty and barber shops) was agreed upon along with a fair employment practices measure which is aimed at keeping the federal government out of Missouri racial affairs.

TRAFFIC SAFETY

Most Missouri governors long have been concerned with the rapidly growing number of traffic accidents and fatalities on state highways and the legislature has taken several steps to help lessen this number.

Among the steps taken were ones to increase the number of highway patrolmen, requirement of visual testing on license renewal and the most important, the chemical test for drunkenness.

The latter is an implied consent measure whereby an applicant for a driver's license is held automatically to have given his consent to be tested for drunkenness while driving if reasonable grounds exist.

Another measure strengthening the hand of the state Highway Patrol allows the use of radar-equipped planes, where the arresting officer on the ground did not actually see the speeding offense occur.

GROSS RECEIPTS TAX

In order to correct a situation created by the state sales tax, the General Assembly was asked to revamp the program into what is commonly called a gross receipts tax. To most people it will have little effect, except the bracketing system has been dropped to provide for the sales tax to start at 15 cents.

Most affected, of course, are vending machine operators who now must pay a three per cent tax on their gross sales. The previous system was held invalid in the courts as it did not specify that it was to tax vendors on the gross receipts.

COUNCIL ON THE ARTS

New York has ably demonstrated that a state council on the arts can be operated at a minimal cost while upgrading the state's cultural heritage. Thus, the General Assembly was asked by Governor Hearnes to place Missouri in a similar position, and he won out, although the initial appropriations request was whacked from a suggested $250,000 to $170,000 but many feel this is a real step in the right direction.

OTHER MEASURES

Other measures enacted by the legislature and accepted by the governor will create an air pollution study program; put into action a conflict of interest law aimed primarily at lobbyists with members of the legislature and the executive branch all but exempted; increases the state Highway Commission from four to six (this was a bill even the governor had all but given up hope on); increase by some $10 million the school foundation law; and set up four-year educational programs at Joplin and St. Joseph.

The governor, however, lost out on a proposal calling for a sharp reduction to a simple majority the margin needed for passage of general obligation bonds. A measure providing for a 60 per cent majority narrowly missed, being lodged in the Senate when final adjournment came.

Newport Jazz Festival Is Small And Peaceful

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Attendance at the 12th Newport Jazz Festival continues small and peaceful. There have been no signs so far that a repeat of the 1960 riots is in the making.

Police arrested 22 persons Thursday night on a variety of minor violations ranging from revelry and littering to violating liquor laws.

Friday night there were 52 arrests, for similar minor infractions.

About 8,500 turned out Friday night for the second evening session of the four-day festival at the big field at Connell Highway where more than 12,000 seats have been set out.

Police at the festival gates checked women patron's handbags and men's clothing to be sure no liquor or weapons were carried in.

An advance sale of more than 45,000 tickets for the seven performances has put the festival on a sound fiscal footing.

Sellout crowds are expected tonight and Sunday night. That's when the big names come in, notably Duke Ellington and Dave Brubeck tonight and Frank Sinatra Sunday night, the closing performance.

Authorities have banned sleeping on beaches this year, and those traditional sandy dormitories for thousands of youngsters at past festivals have been bare and calm.

Santa Busy In Summer Counseling Youngsters

SANTA CLAUS, Ind. AP--What does Santa Claus do in the summer?

Mainly, he talks to youngsters. He asks them if they have been saying their prayers and sharing the toys and happiness he brought them last year.

From Easter to Christmas Eve, this tiny southern Indiana hamlet is Santa Claus Land.

An estimated 500,000 persons this year will visit the town, which traces its history to a group of settlers in the mid-19th century and now enjoys one of the nation's most famous postmarks.

Those who come here, adults and children alike, will be greeted with a hearty "Ho, ho, ho" by Jim Yellig, who has played Santa Claus for nearly 46 years.

Yellig, 72, refuses to step out of character. "This is my life," he says with a twinkle topping his snowy beard.

Since 1930, Yellig has been a full-time Santa. The 120 employes who man the 200-acre Santa Claus Land know him by no other name.

"Lots of kiddies ask me why I'm not at the North Pole," he says. "Well, I tell them I used to be but no one ever came to visit me there."

In winter, when snow drapes the amusement park, the pioneer and Indian villages and the toy museum, the visitors thin out.

The Santa Claus post office annually handles four million pieces of mail, with help from the local American Legion.

The town's population is only 38.

Years ago, a small group of settlers migrated to the gentle rolling hills here to build their log cabins.

On Christmas Eve in 1852, the settlers met in the Salem Methodist church to choose a name for their village. They were irked because the government had rejected a request that the community be named Santa Fe. There already was a town by that name, Washington pointed out.

As they deliberated, the jingle of bells was heard outside. "Santa Claus!" shouted the village children. "It's Santa Claus!" One of the settlers portraying St. Nick had arrived with his bag of presents.

The townspeople quickly voted the name for their village.

In the 114 years since, Santa Claus land has grown to a $750,000-a-year business.

Children tugging at their parents' hands come to meet Santa Claus and get in an early word on what they hope to find beneath the Christmas tree.

"I never promise them anything," says Yellig. "But I tell them all I will do the best I can."

Accuses U. S. Of Blackmail

MOSCOW AP -- Leonid I. Brezhnev accused the United States today of nuclear blackmail by claiming it has more nuclear - armed intercontinental missiles than the Soviet Union.

The number of Soviet missiles is "perfectly sufficient to finish off once and for all any aggressor or any group of aggressors," the first secretary of the Soviet Communist party told military officers at the Kremlin.

"We are satisfied with our rockets," he said, in an account of his speech distributed by the official news agency Tass.

"We have achieved important successes in the creation of antimissile defense facilities. Further important steps were taken lately, which raised their efficiency sharply."

The United States announced Wednesday that it had 800 Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missiles in firing position.

Intelligence reports available in Washington said the Soviet Union had about 270 intercontinental missiles.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I was undecided as to whether I should write to you or run an ad in the classified section of this paper. You see, I have a slightly used boy friend I'd like to get rid of. He broke his leg skiing last November and I can't get him out of my apartment.

The young man is 32, unmarried, handsome in a rugged, Irish way, 6 feet tall, a superb dancer, doesn't drink or smoke (too much) and he is a writer by profession. This is part of the problem. He writes checks on our joint account to which he has contributed nothing for eight months.

When he broke his leg I made the horrible mistake of letting him move into the second bedroom. I wouldn't feel right about throwing him out in the street. An ideal solution would be to find him another home. I'm signing my name, and telephone number in the hope that someone will take this charming moocher off my hands -- and I am not kidding. -- MISS ---. MURRYHILL. ------

Dear ---: Sorry, I can't print your name and telephone number. First, it's against the rules of this column to put one reader in touch with another. Second, I'm afraid you'd be deluged with offers.

All some dames need to know is that a man is 6 feet tall, handsome and a superb dancer and they will try to grab him -- secure in the knowledge that they can overlook his petty faults and turn him into an ideal husband overnight. So, Doll -- no deal.

Dear Ann Landers: Last night a friend and I went to a TV studio to see a give-away show. Several people from the audience volunteered to compete for prizes. I was horrified when a woman who was about eight and a half months pregnant got up on the stage. She looked as if she was going to have twins for sure --maybe triplets.

The master of ceremonies said, "I hope you win something you can use in your condition." The woman won two pairs of skates. Everyone in the audience roared.

The M. C. kept repeating, "in your condition" as if he had to point out to the audience what her condition was. My friend thought this was very funny. I was appalled. Don't you think it was tasteless for the host of the show to exploit the woman this way? Although she was good natured about it I'll bet she felt awful. I'd like your opinion. -- HOUSE DIVIDED.

Dear House: The woman knew she was pregnant when she volunteered to get on the stage. This type of show lives on exploitation -- and she invited it. So save your sympathy.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a wife and two daughters. If you walked into our bathroom at any hour of the day or night you'd think I had a harem of 20. Across the shower rod hang about 15 pairs of nylons, a dozen pairs of unmentionables, and eighteen bras.

Whenever I want to take a shower I have to hack my way through this jungle of underwear. It burns me up.

My wife has a washer-dryer in the utility room and a clothes line in the basement. If you can give me one good reason for these females to clutter up the bathroom like this I'll shut up. Thank you. -- NO MAN'S LAND

Dear No Man: It's easier to suds undies in the bathroom sink than to trek down to the utility room and put them in a machine. Furthermore, elasticized garments last longer if they are laundered by hand.

If you hate fighting underwear at shower time your wife ought to do her hand laundry early in the day and have the rods clear when you come home.

Youth Corps Gives Picture Of Poverty

JEFFERSON CITY AP--The teenage girl looked tired when she came to work and her supervisor, Mrs. Carol Mills, asked if anything was wrong.

"The roof leaked when it rained last night," she explained. "It kept dripping on my bed."

This sort of story can be retold--with endless variations--by supervisors of the newly established Neighborhood Youth Corps. Missouri's Youth Corps program is providing local jobs for 11,769 persons for 10 weeks this summer.

The great majority of the workers live in outstate areas. St. Louis, Kansas City and many smaller communities have their own job projects.

What kind of youths are involved? To find out, an Associated Press writer talked to some of them and their supervisors on the Cole County project.

One boy, a high school sophomore, has two withered arms from a childhood bout with polio. One day recently his supervisor found him working during the lunch break. The boy said he was slower than the others and wanted to catch up.

"At first I had a hard time understanding the instructions," he says, "But I'm getting better."

He is enjoying his first job--filing cards in a state office. His mother said he wanted to get a job before, but she kept him from applying because she was afraid he'd be turned down.

Another worker, a 16-year-old girl, has poor eyesight. A supervisor saw her squinting at papers she was filing and suggested glasses.

"Well uh how much would they cost?" the girl stammered. She was assured they'd be free, paid for by a state agency. Free eye examinations are being provided in various parts of the state for the Youth Corps.

Later the supervisor recalled the first meal the girl bought with her own money--a chocolate cupcake and a piece of chocolate pie. Gradually she has been encouraged to buy balanced meals.

Supervisors put in extra hours counseling their workers. They talk to some about grooming and work habits. If a youth shows interest in going to college, they tell him about enrolling procedure and the probable costs.

"Some of these kids are so poor," says Frank Iuen, Jr., one of the supervisors for Cole County, "one boy showed up for outdoor work with nothing for lunch but a piece of lettuce between two slices of bread."

Iuen and other supervisors stayed up until 10 p.m., recently completing the first payroll. County supervisors throughout the state get $140 a week, project supervisors under them get $120 and the Youth Corps members get $1.25 an hour for 30 hours a week, not including counseling session.

Pay for the 10 weeks comes from about $5,250,000 in federal funds under the war on poverty program. The state chips in about $580,000 more, according to Philip V. Maher, the governor's assistant for urban affairs.

Corps members must be between the ages of 16-21. They qualify under economic brackets that start with families of four or less earning no more than $2,880 a year, with $360 for each additional family member.

If the country waits for proof of a reduction in expenditures first, and then waits while the Congress argues until it achieves agreement with respect to the proper tax reforms, there just won't be any tax cut, at least until too late to fulfill the reason why a tax cut now has been proposed, which is to provide an urgently needed stimulation of the economy.

Campbell Approves New Water Tower

CAMPBELL -- Mayor W. A. Cruse has announced that the city of Campbell has approved a bid for the purchase and erection of a new water storage tank and tower.

Lower bids approved by the councilmen were for $33,530 for the tank and tower, to be erected by the Pittsburg-Des Moines Steel Col. of Des Moines, Iowa; and $2,215 by the Stites Concrete, Inc., of Dexter for the concrete footings.

The contractors have 180 days, or six months, to complete the work. The new water tank will be erected 500 feet north of the old water tank, in order to be nearer the city's second largest artesian well. The old tank will later be completely rebuilt and will remain in service, Mayor Cruse said, giving the city a total of 155,000 gallon storage capacity.

Pittsburgh-Des Moines is the same firm which erected the original water tank at Campbell in 1911.

Timely Tips

BLOOMFIELD -- "A home should be planned to provide a background for the personalities living in it," says Mrs. Fredericka Plummber, Home Management, Area Home Economist.

Are you still seeking ways to Re-Do the house where you now live, that it may reflect your way of life?

The Stoddard County University Extension Center is sponsoring a short course -- "Home Design -- Re-Think and Re - Do." The classes are especially designed to help homemakers to develop an awareness of good design possibilities in their own home. This awareness comes as a knowledge of design elements (space, form, texture and pattern, and color) and principles are learned. "Design in the home must serve two purposes -- function and beauty --" says Mrs. Plummer.

Beginning Thursday July 22, and continuing each Thursday until August 12, Mrs. Plummer will be teaching different topics of home design.

July 22 -- Design in the Home -- July 29 -- What's New in Floor Coverings?

August 5 -- Up Date Your Window Treatment, and August 12 -- Make Light Work for You.

Any homemaker may enroll in all of the classes or attend only the one that she feels will be helpful to her. July 15, has been set as closing date for enrollments. Enrollment should be sent or brought to the University Extension Center. Enrollment blanks may be obtained from the University Extension Center at Bloomfield or from any Home Economics Club President. A $1.00 registration fee or 25¢ per lesson will be collected at the meeting to cover cost of material to be used in the classes.

ST. JOAN OF ARC

St. Joan of Arc was burned at the stake on May 30, 1431, in the Vieux Marche in Rouen, Normandy, the Magazine of Catholic Living states.

Count Basie Is Durable

HOLLYWOOD -- The band played with the same insinuating style, punctuated by harmonic chords on the piano. But something new had been added; a slightly rolling beat reminiscent of the Beatles.

The great Count Basie was leading his band through a recording session at MGM Studios. The number was titled "Skol, Sister," and its faintly rock 'n' roll style was in honor of Ann-Margret, who digs such jive. She is the star of "Made in Paris," in which the Basie band is appearing.

Jazz purists might be aghast at such adulteration of the Basie style, but the pianist-leader himself has no qualms about it.

"If I con't beat 'em, I'll join 'em," he grinned.

That doesn't mean that the Basie band is going to add electric guitars. The count merely believes in keeping up with the times. Such an attitude has helped keep him in the forefront of the band business for 30 years.

Basie will be 61 in August, but he shows no signs of slowing his pace of travel, which amounts to 10 months on the road each year. I noted that members of his present band seemed youthful.

"Yes, I like to have young players in the band," he remarked. "That keeps me up in my work; I don't get a chance to feel old."

The variety of audiences helps maintain his youthful attitude, too.

The count's business remains good, his being one of the few classic bands to maintain a continuity from the 1930s to today. Besides the usual dance dates, he has had great success with concerts, both as a single attraction and as support for such singers as Tony Bennett and Frank Sinatra. He is playing a half-dozen dates with Sinatra this month.

Missouri Leads In Rise Of Income

JEFFERSON CITY--The Missouri State Chamber of Commerce announces that Missouri leads the midwest plains states in per capita personal income percentage increase between 1960 and 1964. The chamberlin pointing out the latest report of President Johnson's council of economic advisors, cited the government statistics, which indicated a 17.8 per cent increase in per capita personal income.

Col. C. R. Stribling, president of the Chamber, said that "although the benefits of our national prosperity have been shared in all parts of the Nation, Missouri was certainly above the national average and ranked in a 10th place tie with Michigan nationally."

Colonel Stribling also pointed out that the government's council based its conclusion on findings that from 1960 to 1964 the average income per person for the whole country rose $330 or 15 per cent, crossing the $2,500 mark. He noted further that, "Missouri's per capita personal income jumped from $2,203 in 1960 to $2,595 in 1964 which takes it beyond the national average."

Auto ownership has increased faster than the population, with registrations more than doubling since 1940. By 1980 cars will number 100 million and other vehicles 20 million. Miles these vehicles have traveled in urban areas (lower chart) more than doubled between 1940 and 1960 and are expected to double again by 1980. Data from Committee on Economic Development.

Packaging Takes Special Machinery

NEW YORK -- It takes some pretty sophisticated machinery to package some of today's sophisticated products -- such as convenience foods, push button toilet articles, or oral contraceptives.

With a few exceptions makers of this packaging machinery are specialized and therefore small as U. S. corporations go. They work closely with the sponsors of new products to devise the machinery needed to package them so they can be transported, displayed -- and successfully moved into consumer hands.

You don't see the machines but do see their handiwork in drug stores, supermarkets and other retail outlets across the nation.

Some members of the Packaging Machinery Manufacturers Institute will tell you that many of today's familiar items would never have reached the public without the discovery of the proper machinery to make the exact, and popular, package.

Even so, the institute president, Eugene E. Lakso, says that the entire industry now boasts only $400 million a year in annual sales. But, he quickly adds, it is growing fast.

Some of the machiner is highly complicated, sort of little brother to computers.

One big corporation with a division in the business is Eastman Kodak of Rochester, N. Y. It has developed a device to pluck a product from one machine while using another to take tiny pellets of raw material loaded in a hopper. It breaks these pellets down, spins them into a packaging material to fit exactly the contour of the product in a few seconds.

Eastman says the package is waterproof, airtight, and keeps the product from spoiling and contamination. The contour package also saves space, time and expense in handling.

Lakso's firm, the Lakso Company of Fitchburg, Mass., is one of several making machinery for sequential packaging of drug products. This process weighs materials for accurate dosage and packages the product individually.

In the field of oral contraceptives, the machines stamp numbers on the pills so that the user has a constant check against error. Now being tested is a machine that will take varying sizes of pills, insert and number them in proper sequence, wrap them in different colored materials as a further prevention of error.

Drug manufacturers also use machines, such as made by the New Jersey Machine Corporation of Hoboken, N. J., which electronically read the labels of raw materials and also scan labels on the finished products to correct errors.

Fact

The tigress is an affectionate mother, generally guarding her cubs with great care. They remain with her until nearly full grown, about the second year, when they are able to kill for themselves. But she has been known to desert them when pressed and even eat them when hungry. As soon as they finish nursing she teaches them to kill small animals.

Fugitive On FBI List

WASHINGTON -- Robert Allen Woodford, a convicted California armed robber and alleged bank bandit, has been added to the FBI's list of "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives."

Woodford was inadvertently released from custody in San Francisco Dec. 14, after withdrawal of a federal indictment for a San Jose, Calif., bank robbery. Instead of being returned to a California prison where he had been serving an armed robbery sentence, Woodford was set free and 17 days later allegedly robbed a San Francisco bank of $2,280.

The confusing escapades of Woodford in the robbery field began on Oct. 14, 1963, when he participated with his brother in an armed robbery of a San Jose, Calif. market.

Then, on the afternoon of Jan. 16, 1964, he allegedly robbed, while armed with a pistol, the main branch of the First National Bank of San Jose, escaping with $1,222.

In May, 1964, Woodford was arrested in Salem, Ore. and returned to San Jose for prosecution on the market robbery charge. He pleaded guilty to this charge in July, 1964, received a five years' to life sentence and was confined at the California Medical Facility at Vacaville, Calif.

The San Jose bank robbery charge was still pending and, in August, 1964, he was indicted for this offense by a federal grand jury. In September, 1964, Woodford was brought from the Vacaville prison to U. S. district court in San Francisco, where the bank robbery charge was dismissed in December, 1964, due to the market robbery sentence he had been previously given by the California court. On Dec. 14, he was inadvertently released.

On Dec. 31, the Market-Geary branch of the Bank of America in San Francisco was robbed by a lone gunman of $2,280. Woodford has been identified as the alleged bank robber.

In addition to the criminal activity previously mentioned, Woodford has been convicted of vagrancy, burglary and assault with a deadly weapon and has been incarcerated in Oregon as well as in California. He has also received treatment in mental hospitals and has been described as having a violent temper with antisocial tendencies.

Woodford is a white American who was born at Warrenton, Ore. March 4, 1939. He is five feet, eight inches tall, weighs 140 to 150 pounds, has brown hair, hazel eyes, medium complexion and medium build. He has scars on the middle and index fingers of his right hand, one on his left index finger and a hernia scar on the left side of his abdomen.

He has been employed as a factory worker, farm worker and truck driver but reportedly abhors strenuous work and does not like to get dirty.

Woodford is said to drink beer, wine, whiskey and vodka moderately, to like spaghetti and Spanish foods, to be a neat and fastidious dresser, fond of expensive sport clothes, and to enjoy frequenting bowling alleys. He reportedly dislikes air travel, preferring automobile transportation.

This fugitive is known to regularly exercise with weights and to be interested in gymnastics. He has a reputation of molesting young girls.

He should be considered armed and extremely dangerous.

Should any person receive information concerning the whereabouts of Woodford, he is requested to immediately notify the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be located on the first page of local telephone directories.

Below Normal Outlook

PORTAGEVILLE -- Near to a little below normal conditions are expected during July in regard to temperatures as well as precipitation. Bear in mind that this applies to the Missouri Bootheel as a whole, and not to a particular farm. In other words, precipitation that does fall will be associated with showers and thundershowers that will be scattered when they do develop. Some areas will receive locally heavy downpours while others may be skipped most of the time.

Similar weather was noted over the Bootheel in June when several areas were so wet that fields could not be entered to carry on weed and grass controls. In other sections crops were showing decided moisture stress by the end of the month. Reports from weather bureau agricultural weather stations show the following rainfall totals for June: Caruthersville, 2.31 inches; Malden, 3.61 inches; Sikeston, 2.00 inches; Kennett, 4.72 inches; Poplar Bluff, 3.91 inches and Delta Center 2.23 inches.

In sections of Mississippi county unofficial reports tell of more than four inches falling within a two-hour period of thunderstorms.

Normal rainfall for July at selected cities are: Caruthersville, 3.56 inches; Morehouse, 2.86 inches; Parma, 3.45 inches; Poplar Bluff, 3.33 inches; Dexter, 3.22 inches; Fisk, 3.29 inches; New Madrid, 3.79 inches and Sikeston 3.12 inches.

Short term averages: Charleston, 3.26 inches; Portageville, 3.14 inches; Malden, 3.52 inches and Kennett 3.18 inches.

Expected pressure patterns over the United States include high pressure extending across the south, allowing less than normal moisture to move into the mid-south from the Gulf of Mexico. Highs crossing the nation will follow a track close to the Canadian border through the Great Lakes region. Cold fronts associated with some of these systems will penetrate southward far enough to touch off occasional thundershowers and provide breaks in the hot weather. Other thundershowers will develop in the warm air that follows cooling periods. These are likely to wet some sections of the Bootheel on 7 to 10 days of the month.

Biggest weather problems will be associated with unreliable and poorly distributed rainfall. Supplemental irrigation is going to be needed just as it was in June. Some insect problems will be heightened by dry weather, County extension directors may be contacted for advice in controlling such yield robbers as spider mites and bollworms.

The occasional breaks in hot, southwesterly flow will also provide an interruption of persistent, troublesome winds that kept a number of fishermen off the water during June. Warm temperatures and plenty of sunny weather means lots of activity on Bootheel rivers and lakes. Swimmers, water skiers and fishermen should need no reminder to keep off the water during thunderstorms. Plan to head for shore well ahead of approaching storms that are well advertised by tall, billowing dark clouds.

SLATTERY'S GAL—Kathie Browne, heroine of many television westerns, becomes the steady girl of Jim (he has a first name now) Slattery of Slattery's People on CBS-TV. Says Kathie: "I couldn't do a love scene and call the man 'Slattery'." So now, it's Jim.

Last week when I had occasion to return to the office late one evening, I met one of the cleaning women in the hall. I stopped to chat with her for a moment, and in the course of our conversation I remarked that I was out of cigarettes and had better go back out and buy some before beginning my work. The cleaning woman told me that her oldest son was helping her and that he'd be glad to do the errand.

"Your oldest son!" I said, surprised. "Why, Jennie, I thought you were an old maid!"

"I am," Jennie replied with great dignity. "But I ain't a fussy old maid!" — P. F. Calkin

DROP OUT?

Very unlikely. The successful newspaperboy is at opposite poles from the quitter by the very fact of having a newspaper route.

His experience shows him that the rewards for the goof-off are slim; that there's no room for the quitter and that the laurels of life go to the person able to meet challenges. He's found that initiative pays big dividends and there is no substitute for learning to deal with people.

Guided by men who are trained to work with boys he develops responsible attitudes, and for the first time, money becomes more than a hand-out. Nothing can replace the satisfaction of purchasing with money he's earned on his own.

You would be surprised to know how many of today's leaders built their success stories on a newspaperboy foundation.

Find Diary Of Adams

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. AP -- A youthful John Adams, pondering his future, exulting in his studies and pining for fair Orlinda, is revealed in a hitherto unknown diary.

Discovery of the manuscript, the earliest known diary of the man who became the second president of the United States, was announced today by L. H. Butterfield, editor-in-chief of the Adams papers, a 100-volume project to collect all documents of the famous family.

The diary was found at the Vermont Historical Society, Montpelier, Vt., among the papers of Royall Tyler, a Vermont judge and writer who once courted Adams' daughter Abigail.

Covering the years 1753 to 1758 when Adams was in his late teens and early twenties, the diary gives many of Adams' impressions of life as a student at Harvard and later as a teacher and law student in Worchester and as a young lawyer in Braintree.

Adams' thoughts were not always on his studies; he wrote in a draft of a letter to an unidentified friend:

"If I look upon a law book and labor to exert all my attention, my eyes tis true are on the book, but imagination is at t tea table with Orlinda, seeing that face, those eyes, that shape, that familiar friendly look and hearing sense divine come . . . from her tongue."

But the attractive Orlinda was not further identified. In any case, Adams at age 29 married Abigail Smith, the daughter of a minister in Weymouth, the next town to his native Braintree.

Another entry, believed to have been written in 1758, asks, "What are the motives that ought to urge me to hard study?

"The desire of fame, fortune and personal pleasure.

"A critical knowledge of the Greek and Roman and French poetry, history and oratory, a thorough comprehensive knowledge of natural, civil, commercial and province law, will draw upon me the esteem and perhaps admiration tho possibly the envy too of the judges of both courts, or the lawyers and of juries, who will spread my fame thro the province, will draw around me a swarm of clients who will furnish me with a plentiful provision for my own support, and for the increase of my fortune. . . I shall be able to defend innocence, to punish guilt and to promote truth and justice among mankind."

Wendell D. Garrett, an associate editor of the Adams papers at the Massachusetts Historical Society, found the diary while looking through the Tyler papers for possible love letters from Adams' daughter to Tyler.

Garrett spotted the document which bore no name but was in Adams' small, cramped handwriting.

Historians are deciphering and editing the 28-page document, preparing it for publication by the Belknap Press of Harvard University Press.

According to Fred L. Schorle of the Sikeston Band, the local band organization now has on hand for the purpose of buying new uniforms approximately $100. A total of $100 more will be needed, it is said, to complete the fund.

Decker's Barber Shop has been redecorated the past week and added facilities for improved service are contemplated.

Berthe & Wilcox, Charleston and St. Louis engineers, were selected by the Sikeston city council Monday evening to draw plans and submit estimates of cost of a sanitary sewer system for this city.

Sikeston was made sad early yesterday morning when it was learned that life had left the body of Mrs. Frances A. Tanner. Mrs. Tanner, who would have been 87 years of age this fall, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Anna T. Winchester, on Tanner street.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. McCord and children will leave today for a few days' visit with relatives at Veedersburg, Oxford and Danville, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wilbur celebrated their 38th wedding anniversary June 27, with a family dinner, their five children and four grandchildren being present.

Robert D. Mow and family are now living in their new home on North New Madrid street, having moved Monday. Leo Smith and family are now occupying the house vacated by Mr. Mow and family.

Harold Pitman, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Pitman, is now recovering from painful injuries which he suffered in two automobile accidents near West Plains Sunday night. He sustained a fractured collarbone and cuts on his legs, face and arms. The first accident happened as Mr. and Mrs. Pitman were returning with another couple from a spring near West Plains after a swimming party and picnic supper. As they traveled a supplementary route their car left the road and turned over in a ditch. The machine was righted and the couples drove on toward home. At a point 10 miles from West Plain, however, the automobile again left the road. It was in this second accident that Mr. Pitman received his injuries.

Today's Spanish Lesson

SPEED SPANISH GOES INTO FINAL WEEK

Three. .two. . one. .zero!

The countdown has started on applying for William Archer's unique Spanish SPEED SPEECH course. Friday is the deadline for sending in your application to receive this easy method of learning the Spanish language. Why not devote 24 hours of sincere study to learning a new language? The time to start is now. You'll be glad you took the easy road to Spanish, instead of employing the conventional method of tedious, tiresome verb conjugations.

William Archer was always a diligent student of Spanish, however, when he and his family moved to Mexico, he found that he could not converse with the natives. This complete inability to communicate properly was the inspiration for the creation of Spanish SPEED SPEECH. This amazing course teaches you to speak and think in Spanish in the same way that a child does. The child learns to express wants and needs by speaking long before he learns what the present tense of a verb is -- so it is with SPEED SPEECH.

Spanish SPEED SPEECH is available only through The Daily Standard. Since it is being offered as a public service to our readers, we are able to give you the entire $14.85 course, which includes textbook, two 45 RPM records, and dictionary, for only $9.12. Here is all you have to do. 1. Tear out coupons Nos. 1 through 4, as they appear daily in The Daily Standard. Save four coupons for each item that you wish to purchase. 2. Send the coupons with the easy order blank, which will appear in The Daily Standard several times each week. That's right, by sending the coupons you save $5.73 if you purchase the entire course. However, you may order only the textbook if you desire. 3. Mail the order blank and a check or money order for $3.04 for each item, payable to The Daily Standard. This exclusive offer enables you to obtain the SPEED SPEECH course, which sells for $14.85 in bookstores, for only $9.12 through this newspaper.

The 16-ton block of basalt is the largest monolithic sculpture ever unearthed in the Western Hemisphere. It is on its way to the World's Fair Mexican pavilion.

Cotton Fields Grass Free In Bootheel

HAYTI -- Missouri cotton fields are free of grass and are in a good state of cultivation. Moisture is adequate. Plants put on squares and made satisfactory growth. Blooms were observed in northern Pemiscot County. The farm labor supply continued plentiful. Wages ranged mostly from $6. to $8.50 per day.

Cotton plants fruited satisfactorily in most localities of the south central region, according to the Consumer and Marketing Service, U. S. D. A. Younger fields are putting on squares and show good potential. Beneficial showers were received in many localities during the week. Insects were generally held under control with the use of insecticide programs. Farmers are busy staying ahead of the weeds and grass and most fields are reported clean.

Spot cotton trading remained slow. Sales decreased from a week earlier. Prices were fairly steady. Farmers netted about $2.00 per bale for their equities. Demand was largely for Middling and lower grades, and supply of cotton was generally dominated by CCC loan equities and government stock cotton.

Domestic mill demand for prompt shipment was fairly good. Some interest was expressed for forward months; however, prices bid tended to restrict trading.

Foreign mill inquiries were about unchanged from a week earlier. Inquiries were mostly for the higher grades of new-crop cotton for forward delivery. Interest was shown by mills in the Far East, Near East and Europe.

Big news for telephone users:

Reduction of excise tax means lower telephone bills for Missouri customers

Effective January 1, 1966, the Federal Excise Tax on telephone service will be reduced from 10 to 3 per cent. Following the initial drop, the tax will be lowered 1 per cent each year until it is eliminated in 1969.

Telephone users will receive the full cash benefit from this tax reduction. The tax, which is levied directly on those who use telephone service, has been included on monthly telephone bills, and each month your tax payment has been sent on to the federal government. In effect, the telephone company has been a collection agency. Telephone bills, beginning in January, will be reduced to reflect the 7 per cent decrease.

When the excise tax is eliminated in 1969, telephone users in Missouri will save more than $22 million annually. This will mean about $2 million a month added to Missourians' spendable income.

When I Was A Boy

As compiled by Ralph Gregory, Curator of the Mark Twain Shrine, Florida, from the writings of the founder of the Appeal, B. F. "Pappy" Blanton, in 1919-20. A contemporary of Mark Twain, "Pappy" Blanton wrote of the times and customs that were so dear to Twain, and about which Twain wrote so many interesting and humorous anecdotes. (Verbatim copy, with some questions and guesses as to missing words)

B. F. "Pappy" Blanton

August 15, 1919

When I was a boy Negroes were not permitted to leave their homes without a pass from their owner. There were 'patrollers' whose business it was to whip any Negro caught away from home without a pass, and was paid for each one whipped. However, this did not prevent young Negro men from going visiting at night, for the white children often wrote passes for them, and I have scribbled passes before I could write, the Negro saying that while the patrol was trying to make out what was on the paper he could make his escape and he always did -- except at one time when two patrol officers were together. I now know that patrolling was a brutal custom and none but the toughest white men would take the place.

When I was a boy I never heard of a pair of socks or stockings being bought by anybody in the country. All the socks and stockings for both master and slave were knitted at home out of home made yarn that had been carded and spun right on the premises. And most of the shoes and boots were made at home also. Life was not a dream back in the country when I was a boy, but there was one blessed thing about living then and that was that nearly everybody was happy and contented with their lot and willing to extend the helping hand to anyone in need. Nobody had much money, neither did they need much as taxes were almost nothing and about all one had to buy was coffee and sugar, a little calico and domestic, and occasionally a little tea. People lived off the farm and lived well.

When I was a boy many farmers gathered their corn and threw it in a huge pile along side of the crib, usually under a shed. Then when it was all gathered invitations were sent out inviting the neighbors to a corn shucking. Uusally the shuckers were Negroes who paired off, dividing the pile of corn, chose captains and the fun commenced. One man would sing by himself but all the men would join in the chorus. It was better than a modern concert and Caruso was not much ahead of some of those Negro singers. There was always plenty of liquor refreshments and at midnight the men marched to the houses, generally carrying the owners on their shoulders, where they were served with all they could eat of the very best the country could furnish. Such a feast would cost a dollar and a half a plate now. We will never see such happy days again, as the people are money mad.

When I was a boy about ten years of age an old man named Hatwood, everybody called him "Old Hatawood," roved through the country at will. He was the dirtiest man I have ever seen and was idiotic, but harmless. He sometimes got pretty drunk and, of course, was more idiotic then than he was before, as most men were when drunk. Old Hatwood had no home that I ever heard of, but just went from house to house to get a bite to eat and his appearance generally caused the kids to hide out or stay mighty close to their mammas. Nowadays such a character would be sent to the poor house or infirmary as we now call them, but if there was such a place then I never knew it. What became of the poor old derilect no one seemed to know. We have more to be thankful for now than ever before as we have all the comforts that were denied the people when I was a boy.

When I was a boy I knew a good old woman who, with her family, had come out of Kentucky. Some seasons had been awfully wet, some had been dreadfully dry, some had been extremely cold and some seasons awfully hot, so, not being very well pleased with the country and her surroundings she longed to return to her beloved Kentucky. So she broached the subject to her husband in this way: "This is the hottest and the coldest, the wettest and the dryest and the hell damndest country in the world, and I want to go back home." But they did not go back and some of her descendants now are honored citizens of Howard county. While I was still a boy this good lady while drying apples, fell from a shed and broke both her arms, poor thing.

When I was a boy my grandfather owned perhaps the largest orchard in the county, about ten acres, which is not much of an orchard these days. He also had a small nursery in which all the best varieties of apples were cultivated. I remember well that men drove all the way from upper Missouri and Southern Iowa to buy apples for which they paid 50 cents a bushel. In the fall the cider mill would be started and many barrels of cider was made and sold in Glasgow. The little white boys and little Negro boys had to pick up the apples and carry them to the cider mill and as there seemed to be millions of yellow jackets with sharp stingers, and we were all in our long shirt tails, the yellow jackets made it mighty lively for us at times, but we were happy just the same.

When I was a boy there were many customs that are now obsolete. One of them was the use of hair oil which was in common use by both men and women, especially among the young men and the young women. When a young fellow wanted to call on his best girl he greased his hair with bear's oil, highly scented with perfume, got out his Sunday boots, gave they a good greasing with tallow, put on a stiff pleated bosom white shirt and his suit of mixed jeans clothes and went a wooing a girl that used as much hair oil as he did, but of a finer quality. Now these young people were just as good, honest and upright youngsters as can be found anywhere now and smelt a great deal better than many of the young swains you meet now.

When I was a boy of 8 or 9 years of age an incident occurred in my life that has always caused me to make excuses for the short comings of children. The incident was this: There had been a party or a wedding at our house and next morning I was sent with a small cake to a Mrs. Woods, one of our wealthy neighbors. I started in good faith, but on the road I got to pinching bites off the edges of the cake and when I finally looked at the cake it was so ragged on the edges that I was ashamed to take it to the lady, so I sat down ate all I could and stuffed the balance in a hollow log. One wrong leads to another, so I told that Mrs. Woods thought the cake mighty fine. Now, I never thought of doing wrong and I know from my experience that children do things without thinking of the wrong, so all my life I have looked over the faults of kids and loved them all and hope to die still loving them all.

When I was a boy there were thrills that came to a country boy that few boys now know anything about. For instance in winter time every boy in the country knew how to make a trap in which to catch a partridge. We had never head of the word "quail" then where I lived. To a red-blooded boy nothing could stir his blood quicker than to visit his trap and see it almost full of the pretty birds. The lad may have been pretty cold when he got to his trap but the sight of the trap full of birds caused his blood to flow so fast that he was so warm that he would throw off his gloves and get busy taking out the birds.

U.S. Troops Join Fighters

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP --More than 1,000 American troops joined Vietnamese and Australian forces today for their second combined operation against the Viet Cong. Like the first such operation, there was no significant contact with the enemy, a U.S. spokesman reported.

Fighting was bloodier elsewhere. A U. S. spokesman said two Americans and 26 Vietnamese mountain troops were missing and four Vietnamese were killed in mountainous Pleiku Province, 215 miles northeast of Saigon.

About 2,500 troops were involved in the combined operation, including two battalions of U. S. paratroopers from the 173rd Airborne Brigade, one battalion of the Royal Australian Regiment, and two Vietnamese army battalions.

Long Defends Electric Co-ops

EL DORADO SPRINGS, Mo. AP -- Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., said today the Federal Power Commission is "totally mistaken and misguided when it tries to extend its jurisdiction over the rural electric cooperatives."

Addressing the annual meeting of the Sac Osage Electric Cooperative here, he said "Congress has no intention of letting FPC meddle in the affairs of the co-ops."

Citing the progress of the Rural Electric Power Administration Senator Long said in 1935 about one in every 15 Missouri farms was receiving electric service. The first financed REA line went into operation in August, 1937, he said, and now "better than 98 out of every 100 farms in our state are receiving electric service."

He said the Senate Commerce Commission recently approved legislation that declares co-operatives are outside the jurisdiction of the FPC.

"We will make every effort to gain final passage and enactment into law in this session of Congress," he said.

COMFORT
Driving cool is the obvious pleasure of air conditioning, but there are other gratifying advantages. Comfort is increased by driving with the windows up, thereby eliminating noise, dust, smog and pollen.

SAFETY
A comfortable driver is a more alert driver. This is particularly true on longer trips, where fatigue is hastened by physical discomfort and road noise. Air conditioning eliminates these hazards.

ECONOMY
ARA air conditioning costs very little to install. Operating and maintenance costs are negligible, and most units can be transferred to your next car. This reduction in gasoline mileage is minimal.

31 Die in Missouri Traffic Accidents During Holiday

Toll Rises To 542

Belated reports of traffic deaths during the three-day Fourth of July weekend raised the national toll today to 542, a record for a three-day observance of the holiday.

Final figures were expected to raise the total killed during the 78-hour weekend even higher.

The previous record toll for a three-day Independence Day holiday was 504, set last year.

The count of traffic fatalities this year came close to the record for a four-day Independence observance, 557 in 1963.

The tally of traffic deaths began at 6 p.m. Friday and continued to midnight Monday.

This year's toll brought a stern warning from Howard Pyle, president of the National Safety Council.

"Never has driver improvement been more badly needed," Pyle said. "The attitudes and skills of too many drivers are failing to meet the exacting demands of billions of miles of high pressure travel.

"Every driver," Pyle said, "should being at once to sharpen old skills and develop a new ones through available driver improvements programs."

Another safety council spokesman estimated that the final toll would be about 550 traffic deaths. "More traffic fatalities may be counted during the final hours of the weekend," he said.

Boating accidents across the nation took 35 lives and 119 persons drowned in accidents not involving boats during the three-day weekend.

In the accident Sunday south of Portageville Edna Rice was a passenger of a 1964 Rambler driven by Gilbert McCuthen, 28, Caruthersville. He is in the Pemiscot County Hospital, Hayti, with head and body injuries and reported in critical conditon. A 1955 trailer tractor, driven by Charles Flowers, Tampa, Fla., struck the Rambler after the Rambler had slowed down to make a turn and skidded into the path of the truck. The truck driver was not injured. The Rice woman was taken to the LaForge Funeral Home in Caruthersville.

There were 11 injuries in a single accident Saturday at 7:30 a.m. at Portageville, after a 1954 Buick driven by Danny Stoker, 18, Conway, Ark., stopped at a stop light. He was struck by a 1963 Mercury driven by Clarence Walker, 28, Chicago, Ill., and in turn the Mercury was struck by a 1964 Plymouth driven by Louistine Clark, 31, St. Louis, after which a fourth car, a 1962 Studebaker, driven by John Bethel, 24, Nappanee, Ind., ran into the rear of the Studebaker.

Absentee Ballots Ordered

Registered Sikeston voters who will be out of town July 27 for the special $1,200,000 bond election for water and sewage improvements were urged today to cast an absentee ballot by City Clerk John Vaughn. Votes may be cast any time until the day preceding the election, Vaughn said.

Bids will be taken today for the printing of about 100 absentee ballots, the clerk said, which will be available in his office later this month.

An absentee ballot may be voted in the clerk's office at the city administration building or mailed to the voter who requests a ballot. "Mailing the ballot is a little more trouble for the voter," Vaughn said, "because he must get his ballot notarized before mailing it back to us."

Any registered Sikeston voter is eligible to cast an absentee ballot.

Resorts Plan To Get Tough With Rioters

Officials called today for tougher penalties and firmness in the wake of rioting and disturbances by beer-drinking, carousing youths in five resort towns over the Fourth of July weekend.

Mayor Wilson W. Finley of Geneva-on-the-Lake, Ohio, where nearly 300 young people were arrested, said he plans to draft new ordinances with higher penalties for disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

"What we need," said Finley, "is more and more enforcement. And we need higher fines."

The rioting at Geneva-on-the-Lake, on Lake Erie, and at Russells Point, Ohio, on Indian Lake in western Ohio, where some 100 persons were arrested, prompted Sen. Frank J. Lausche, D-Ohio, to issue the following statement:

"Only encouragement will be given future riots unless the prosecutors, the sheriffs and other law enforcement officials are given support by the judges. I do hope that the pleas advanced by lawyers and social workers that youth must be dealt with gently under the circumstances prevailing at these two resorts will not be given attention."

The rioters were mainly teenagers and college students.

Other trouble spots were Rockaway Beach, Mo., and Lake George, N.Y.

Cardwell said he has devised a plan for preventing a recurrence but "I don't aim to publicize it at this time."

Sophia Loren's Bigamy Trial Postponed

ROME AP -- Italy brought Academy Award winning actress Sophia Loren and movie producer Carlo Ponti to trial today in a Rome criminal court on bigamy charges.

The court formally opened the case and then, after a 30-minute session, granted the movie couple's request for a postponement. The next session was set for Oct. 21.

The accusation has pursued the pair since soon after their marriage by proxy at Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, in September 1957. It was her first marriage and his second.

Ponti, 51, first met Sophia in Rome in 1955, nine years after he married the daughter of an Italian general, Giuliana Fiastri, and set about gaining a reputation as a maker of movies.

Ponti became her mentor. Within two years they went to New York. Ponti got a Mexican divorce, then he and Sophia were married by proxy.

Divorce is illegal in Italy.

31 Die in Missouri Traffic Accidents During Holiday

Toll Rises To 542

Belated reports of traffic deaths during the three-day Fourth of July weekend raised the national toll today to 542, a record for a three-day observance of the holiday.

"Every driver," Pyle said, "should being at once to sharpen old skills and develop a new ones through available driver improvements programs."

Another safety council spokesman estimated that the final toll would be about 550 traffic deaths. "More traffic fatalities may be counted during the final hours of the weekend," he said.

Boating accidents across the nation took 35 lives and 119 persons drowned in accidents not involving boats during the three-day weekend.

Check Case Bound Over

Bill Bohannon, Charleston, was released on $300 bond today in magistrate court on a charge of writing a fraudulent check.

His preliminary hearing was waived and the case was bound over to circuit court.

There were four other cases brought before Judge M. E. Montgomery in this morning's session of court.

Larry Mays, route one, and David Ayers, 226 Ruth, were each fined $50 and costs by the court on a charge of being a minor in possession of liquor. Half of their fine was stayed pending good behavior for one year.

Reva Curtner, route three, had case continued for one week to answer to a charge of selling beer to a minor.

John Felker, 708 Taylor, had a charge of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor continued for one week.

Truman Talks At Celebration

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. AP--A crowd of about 1,200 friends, townspeople and tourists gathered at the Truman Library Monday to hear Harry S. Truman speak at a brief Independence Day observance.

"I'm going to talk to you about the Fourth of July," said the 81-year-old former President, who is making fewer and fewer public appearances.

He proceeded then to deliver an old-fashioned history lesson. It spanned all 189 years of the country's history, from the day in July, 1776, when the Continental Congress passed its resolution to submit its statement of grievances, to the admission of Alaska and Hawaii as the 49th and 50th states.

Sophia Loren's Bigamy Trial Postponed

ROME AP -- Italy brought Academy Award winning actress Sophia Loren and movie producer Carlo Ponti to trial today in a Rome criminal court on bigamy charges.

The court formally opened the case and then, after a 30-minute session, granted the movie couple's request for a postponement. The next session was set for Oct. 21.

Neither Miss Loren nor Ponti were in court. They are doing film work outside Italy. Their attorneys represented them.

The accusation has pursued the pair since soon after their marriage by proxy at Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, in September 1957. It was her first marriage and his second.

Ponti, 51, first met Sophia in Rome in 1955, nine years after he married the daughter of an Italian general, Giuliana Fiastri, and set about gaining a reputation as a maker of movies.

Miss Loren was 20 then, a tall and shapely beauty whose real name was Sophia Scicolone.

Ponti became her mentor. Within two years they went to New York. Ponti got a Mexican divorce, then he and Sophia were married by proxy.

Divorce is illegal in Italy.

IT'S A FACT

July 4th is justly celebrated as the date the Declaration of Independence was approved by the continental congress, even though the day on which the final separation was officially voted was July 2nd and the final signature was not affixed until 1777.

However, July 4th is notable for other reasons. To wit:

The U. S. Military Academy was formally opened in 1802.

Nathaniel Hawthorne, novelist and short-story writer, was born in North Salem, Massachusetts, in 1804.

Stephen Foster, America's first great composer of music, was born at Lawrenceville, Massachusetts, in 1826.

John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, second and third presidents of the U. S., both died on this date, fifty years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

The song "America" was first publicly sung by the children of Boston at a Fourth of July celebration in 1832.

Poet Walt Whitman published in Brooklyn, New York, the first edition of Leaves of Grass in 1855.

Calvin Coolidge, 30th president of the U. S., was born in Plymouth, Vermont, in 1872.

George M. Cohan, American composer, actor, and theatrical producer, was born in 1878.

General John J. Pershing placed a wreath on the grave of the Marquis de Lafayette in Paris in 1917, saying, "Lafayette, we are here."

AS GLORIOUS AS EVER

THE GLORIOUS Fourth, was just as glorious as ever.

And the beautiful Star Spangled Banner, always a special focus of Independence Day thoughts, waved just as proudly as it has in the past.

It can wave even more proudly, in fact: for our nation's increasing years have brought to our Flag constantly increasing cause for pride.

TRUE, THE ways of observing this birthday of our independence have changed. Gone is some of the boisterousness of other eras; the indiscriminate placing of loud and lethal fireworks in young hands has diminished; the riotous routs, for which the Fourth was only an excuse, have dwindled.

What remains means more than what we used to have. It contains more sincerity. The bands still play, and their airs are just as stirring as ever. The patriotic gatherings are still held. Audiences are still spellbound by speeches turned to the occasion.

Fourth of July picnics still are main events, whether they are colossal affairs prepared with tremendous effort in behalf of charity, or modest gatherings of families or groups of friends on relaxing outings.

WHATEVER FORM Sunday's observances were, there is a deep belief that there will be more realization of what is behind it all. That more minds will dwell on the greatness of our country, and on love for it.

In the past, just as now, there have been times when many Americans wondered if the United States was traveling the road to pride. In 1776 and the young years that followed there were strongly differing opinions about our course. During all our wars, and all our peacetime crises, there have been sincere, thoughtful citizens who were firmly convinced our country was headed for perdition.

BUT THE passage of time is a great analyzer. We know now that in the Revolutionary days, thanks to those true Americans who framed the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution and Bill of Rights, we got on the road to pride and stayed on it. In 1812, and in 1860, bitter as the schism was, we know now that our country took the right path.

In the war with Spain, the United States acted with humanity and justice. The first and second world wars, with all their dreadful carnage, brought further pride to our Flag because it never ceased to represent what was right.

Korea and its tragedies found us refusing to depart from the ways of national integrity -- always a cause for pride. Presently, Vietnam is an undermined situation, but we are clinging to the cause of proud principles.

There is no doubt that through the years more and more garlands of pride have been laid before the Stars and Stripes.

OUR COMMUNITY observed the 189th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. Dignity and patriotism in order.

The Flag was displayed at hundreds of our citizens' homes.

For the Fourth and our nation are as glorious as ever.

Our columnist Victor Riesel is about to take off for a series of news fronts which he believes need a new kind of coverage.

It was his behind-the-scenes reporting from Asia, Africa, Latin America and even in Europe which brought into the world spotlight the previously unnoticed men of real power who within a few months became international headline-makers.

Riesel digs them out by following his beat around the world. No coverage of American labor is complete without getting into the unreported news of international labor, or the new global unionism, or the U. S. labor leaders and contacts and activities abroad.

This is a new era for them. They spend millions of dollars on other continents. They have become the new jet set. They cooperate with "sister" unions in other lands and talk of international coordination on the industrial and strike fronts.

In many instances, men whom American labor has supported financially and politically have become ministers and leaders of the opposition parties. Many of these labor leaders today are in international diplomacy and are found frequently in the halls of the UN and Geneva "palaces."

Many, whom Riesel was the first to discover, have made grim headlines. In mid-August 1963, for example, after thousands of miles through Latin America, Riesel wound up in Santo Domingo and reported that the Dominican Republic was Fidel Castro's next target.

Your columnist warned then, long before any such reports came out of the island nation, that the world would soon learn that Communist cadres, built around labor action squads would move in that land. It happened.

During the trip, Riesel reported the activities of Juan Lechin in Bolivia and predicted that this miners' chief would lead a revolt. A few months ago, Lechin, with a labor army at his back, did just that.

Riesel was the first to report the infra-power structure of the Communist unions in Brazil. He predicted that this would be the base of a rebellion there. A year later, such a revolt started with a union hall as a headquarters. Fortunately it was put down by the present, pro-US. regime of President Branco.

Now Riesel is off for a labor reporting trip. This time with Santo Domingo in mind, Riesel will go deep into the smaller nations, the now obviously vital island republics, the "postage stamp countries" of the Caribbean and Central and Latin America. If any of these tiny lands ever are captured by Communist cadres, they would sound as loud as though they were a land mass the size of China.

In the tiny nations, control of the labor movements could mean control of the country. This story Riesel will seek out and report -- also the stores of labor - management cooperation against the Sino-Soviet - Castro operations.

To give Victor Riesel travel time and a chance to set up operations, some of the nation's most eminent leaders have agreed to answer with column - length statements vital questions put to them by Riesel.

Among these pinch - hitter "columnists" covering for Riesel are Secretary of Defense Robert A. McNamara; National Aeronautical and Space Administration Director James E. Webb; AFL- CIO President George Meany; Michigan's Governor George Romney; FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover; U. S. Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach; the world authority on cybernetics, John Diebold, who invented the word "automation"; W. P. Gullander, president of the National Assn. of Manufacturers; Dave Dubinsky, labor confidant of presidents, and Secy. of Commerce John Connor.

BIG PAD

The largest leaves in the world are those of the South American water lily known as the "Victoria Regia," named for Queen Victoria. The enormous floating pads may be almost forty feet around.

Colonel Hugh H. Waggoner, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, today urged boating enthusiasts to use great caution when towing their craft on the State's highways.

Colonel Waggoner said: "Many pleasure boats will be traveling on the highways. I urge their owners to take every precaution to avoid a traffic accident.

"The Missouri Boat Commission has advised us that at the present time there are more than 57,000 boats registered in Missouri. They are constantly being towed to lakes or streams. I would like to remind motorists that any time a trailer of any description is in tow, they should use extra traffic caution."

Colonel Waggoner pointed out some of the Missouri Traffic Regulations regarding trailers hitched to automobiles. He said: "Missouri Traffic Regulations require that trailers have one red tail lamp visible 500 feet to the rear of the vehicle and one white lamp illuminating the license plate visible 50 feet to the rear."

The Patrol Superintendent also stated that an outside rear view mirror is required if the operator cannot see the road behind the trailer from inside the towing vehicle.

"The week of July 4 has been proclaimed National Safe Boating Week in Missouri by Governor Warren Hearnes," Colonel Waggoner concluded. "During this week and the rest of the summer, many watercraft will see service on our lakes and streams. I urge motorists to be alert of these towed boats on the highways. I also wish the owners of the crafts clear and safe sailing on the waterways."

July 6, 1854 -- The Republican Party was founded at Jackson, Michigan, after a mass meeting of Whigs, Democrats and Free Soilers.

Hal Boyle

DA NANG, South Viet Nam AP -- It all happened in 16 terrible minutes.

In that incredible fraction of an hour, a U. S. Air Force pilot napalm-bombed a target, his plane caught fire, he bailed out, landed in enemy territory and was plucked to safety by a passing Army helicopter.

"That's the only real emergency I've had in more than 4,000 hours in the air," said Capt. Edward F. Gallardo, 33, of Armstrong Creek, Wis.

"I feel much safer flying a jet plane than I do driving an automobile."

Ed is a dark-haired, F100 pilot who stands 5 feet 5, and weighs only 137 pounds. His wife, Pat, and their five children -- none of whom is more than 5 years old--live in Hampton, Va.

The fighter pilot's battle ordeal came on a recent Sunday when he had to skip morning religious services because of an early mission.

The mission was his 35th in some 40 days.

"I was first of our flight in on the target, some Viet Cong emplacements 42 miles south of here," said Gallardo. "I came in fast at 50 to 100 feet above the ground.

"I pushed what we call the pickle button to release the napalm cans. Immediately there was a loud explsion, and the cockpit filled with smoke. I didn't know whether I had been hit by ground fire, or something had gone wrong with the napalm.

"But I couldn't see out. My plane was on fire."

Instinctively, he put the plane into a climb.

"The smoke began to clear, but my plane was burning badly. I didn't know whether it would blow up or not. But you don't bail out over a target area if you can help it, and I headed toward the sea.

"I got up to 5,000 feet. At 6,000 feet the speed began to bleed down. The plane started to roll. The controls had burned away. I had become just a passenger, I had to go."

The captain jettisoned his canopy, pulled his triggers and was ejected.

"There was a big blast, and the next thing I knew I was floating down about 12 miles from the target area. It was a great view and I had plenty of time to think, but all I thought about was landing in a clear space."

Gallardo landed standing up between two houses in a native hamlet.

"I hit about 20 feet from a small boy," he said. "His eyes got big, he made a 180-degree turn and ran. I ran in the opposite direction toward a rice paddy, scattering dogs and chickens. I could be picked up there, but hide in the shrubbery around it if necessary."

Five planes circled protectively around his position and a pararescue team scrambled at the base here to get him. But an Army helicopter crew, apprised of his plight, picked him up.

"I wasn't on the ground more than five minutes," said the captain.

That afternoon at 5 o'clock the captain knelt at Mass in a chapel here.

Usually a cruise ship going to Iceland, India, South Africa, or around the world, announces a sailing date six months to a year, or even two years, before sailing. A schedule of calls is fixed, including a dozen or more shore excursions, and a price is put on each cabin and excursion.

Tourist cruises, which mean inexpensive cruises, are sold out two years in advance. People book luxury cruises six months ahead and women book dates with hairdressers aboard two months ahead. Table reservations are wangled long before sailing, as are the location of deck chairs. An innocent latecomer is apt to find himself a bit helpless.

This proposed gun law in effect would hold the lawabiding citizens arms while two or more reds beat him up and robbed him, while the constitution with no ands or buts says The right to bear arms shall not be questioned. We can all see the difficulty and danger of law officers, but with the records now kept, the law could crack down on known crimnals that there would be few to take the chance with firearms. When and if this law takes effect, 10 per cent of our population as police would be too few to protect unarmed citizens.

H. L. Hunt Says

CIVIL SERVICE

The time has come to begin asking searching questions about an institution in our government often regarded as automatically "a good thing": the civil service system.

The civil service system was established more than three quarters of a century ago when, comparatively speaking, our government was a minnow in relation to the great whale it has since become. The making of government policy in those far-off days was a task a very small number of people could perform. The somewhat larger number who carried out the policies had nothing to do with making them, and there was no reason why they should not be kept permanently on the job.

But today, professional civil servants fill many vital policy-making positions in Washington. They staff the "middle echelon" of the State Department and related agencies where vital decisions are made concerning our nation's safety. They regulate many of the nation's businesses. They gather statistics on which our whole national economic policy is based.

Holding critical positions, hostile civil servants can effectively undermine any policy they dislike while effectively promoting policies they do like, regardless of the wishes of their appointed superiors. Yet under civil service regulations, it is almost impossible to remove even the most obstructive.

Serious consideration should be given to removing the nearly absolute guarantee of job security from those whose job involves the nation's security, and replacing it with a more fexible system which will insure that our policies are faithfully carried out.

For competent, faithful service, our civil servants deserve just compensation, but not a "right" to unending support by the taxpayers regardless of performance. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Now that open fighting between Americans and Viet Cong has been decided on, Gen. William Westmoreland, U.S. commander in South Viet Nam, has urged the Pentagon to clarify who should be in command of the American troops on the battlefield.

The Americans have been sent to South Viet Nam to backstop the South Vietnamese, not command them. And Vietnamese officers will be offended if an American is placed in command over them. But Gen. Westmoreland also doesn't like the idea of leaving the fate of thousands of American GI's in the hands of less experienced South Vietnamese officers.

He wants a unified command under his control, even though it's a political affront to the South Vietnamese. Westmoreland is hopeful that some way can be worked out to keep American troops under U.S. command wherever they go into action. Partial command would be impractical, however, in a major battle, for whoever is directing a battle must have direct authority over all the troops.

Meanwhile the latest intelligence reports identify nine North Vietnamese battalions operating inside South Viet Nam. The buildup is so formidable that major battles could be launched at any time.

Some military advisers have recommended pulling all troops out of the remote guerrilla-controlled areas. This would shorten our supply lines and save isolated outposts from being overrun.

However, such withdrawal might be interpreted as weakness and seriously injure South Vietnamese morale.

—SON OF BOXING—

What does a young man do when he's the son of a famous heavyweight boxing champion and is elected to Congress? That is the question being asked about John Tunney, son of "Gentleman Gene" Tunney, who defeated Jack Dempsey to become world champion on Sept. 26, 1926.

Gene Tunney, whose home is in Connecticut, was a Republican. His son John, who represents the arid tip of Southern California, is a Democrat. The elder Tunney, however, switched last November to go all out for the Democrats — and his son.

This week young Tunney is doing what might be expected of a son of boxing and is holding hearings on a bill to clean up that sport. He proposes establishing a national boxing commission so that championship matches cannot be shopped around from state to state as the Liston-Clay fight was shopped from Miami to Boston, to Maine because other state commissions would not license it. A national boxing commission would prevent this, also ban boxers with ties in the underworld.

Young Congressman John Tunney has not stopped with legislation on boxing. He is pushing a national minimum wage of $1.25 for agricultural workers, despite opposition of the big Southern California ranchers; is urging improved living conditions for migrant workers and recently got $120,000 for bettering them in the Coachella Valley.

Tunney also proposes including hospital employees in the new Social Security bill, is plugging to keep $1,600,000 in the budget to build reservoirs in the Imperial Valley so that when farmers order water for irrigation purposes and on top of this it rains, they can impound their surplus water, not turn it loose in the desert.

—UNWANTED COLLEGE—

Most cities are delighted to be the home of a college. But Cape May, N.J., is battling to oust Shelton College, an institution of dubious learning founded by rabble-rousing Rev. Carl McIntire, the defrocked ex-Presbyterian minister.

The city council of Cape May and Mayor Frank Gauvry have voted to oust the college. However, Rev. McIntire has flatly refused to move it.

Recently McIntire wrote a letter to Mayor Gauvry inviting him to greet Sen. Strom Thurmond, the South Carolina Dixiecrat, "at a patriotic rally under our auspices. . .for individual freedom."

"In our controversy with you concerning Shelton College," said Rev. McIntire, "you said you did not approve of such speakers as the Senator when he was mentioned by name as coming to Cape May. We are especially desirous that you have this opportunity to meet this distinguished U.S. Senator and great Amgerican and also that in your capacity as a civic spokesman you greet the Senator.

"It will be conducive for better understanding and appreciation of the liberties which we enjoy as Americans," wrote McIntire.

Mayor Gauvry declined.

Meanwhile Shelton College is housed in the Christian Admiral Hotel, owned by McIntire, where he continues to be a thorn in the flesh of the city council.

Cape May authorities met with college authorities, asked if they intended to continue bringing such speakers as Gen. Edwin Walker, who retired from the Army after a squabble involving the teaching of John Birch literature to troops, and Sen. Thurmond. The college stated that it did so intend.

The institution has only one hundred students. Indications are that its accreditation will not be renewed. The Cape May city council has denied it rezoning, and the New Jersey Supreme Court has upheld the city.

Shelton College is now under orders to vacate the hotel by September, 1966. The city fathers of Cape May are anxious for education but not of this variety.

—UNDERGROUND WIRING—

A White House panel, headed by Walker Cisler of Detroit-Edison, has urged more underground electric wiring as part of the President's program to beautify America.

The panel commended progress in Los Angeles, where all electric utility service in new suburban areas is scheduled to be underground by the early 1970's.

However, due to the excessive costs of underground transmission, White House consultants suggest that aboveground electric wiring can be blended into surroundings in order to preserve natural beauty.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Reuther Moving to Train Nation's Poor for Action.

Washington, D. C.: -- In olden days when one's grandmother, newly arrived on these shores, sought for an expression of futility, she'd shrug her shoulders and in her best American-ese say: "You can't fight City Hall."

She was poor then. City Hall was the castle on the mountaintop. But the poor are different today. They are fighting city hall -- all over the land. They are well organized. They are a new social force.

Though still unnoticed, theirs is a social revolution, a challenge to the local "establishment" and to the old-line political leaders and, yes indeed, soon a challenge to America's labor leadership as well.

Those in the "Poverty" headquarters of Sargent Shriver here see it clearly.

So does the president Walt Reuther.

They see it coming not so much because of the distribution of millions of dollars to millions of people in seething tenement districts.

They see it, rather, as a result of the organization and training of the poor for leadership in the slum - jammed precincts of the nation's great cities.

Out of this will come an inner infra - structure of political strength which will be in the hands of proletarians still unknown.

There is much to "support the thesis that there is something of a social revolution in the making," one of Sargent Shriver's Office of Economic Opportunity highly - placed colleagues said to a friend the other day, "which has its implications for the 'local establishments' and, indeed, for labor organizations too."

He pointed out that his chief, Sargent Shriver, also refers to the development as a "social revolution," and noted that even the most liberal of mayors are disturbed by the poor's challenge to their City Hall power.

"This arises first out of the requirement in the Economic Opportunity Act that there be '. . . maximum feasible participation of residents of the areas and members of the corporations served' in community action program to eliminate poverty," he explained. "Therefore, the poor are re-enfranchised and are beginning to speak for themselves to constitute another voice to be reckoned with in civic affairs.

"It may well be that those of the poor who are being paid to help administer some of the anti - poverty programs will throw up from their ranks new leaders of a segment of our population -- the poor -- which totals 34.6 million throughout the nation."

Already there are some 45,000 paid poor involved in Project Head - Start alone. This is the eight-week summer training program for poor children who will enter school this fall.

There are more than 30,000 additional poor who will be paid employes of other community action programs by summer's end.

And this is just the beginning. Several hundred thousand more poor will be hired to work for and administer anti-poverty programs street by street, community by community.

On each local Community Action Agency's governing board there will be an average of 10 poor as policy-makers. These will total in the thousands eventually. They will be elected in their precincts. They, not the clubhouse leader, will become the poor's advocates -- at city hall and, soon, inside the labor movement.

Reuther has moved to meet this social challenge by joining with the challengers. Under his leadership and with a grant of auto union funds, he has launched the Citizens' Crusade Against Poverty. It now has a Washington headquarters and in August it will have a full time director.

Reuther's theme was struck in a recent statement. Characteristically, he said: "Plans for developing leadership potentials among the poor are based on the already demonstrated capacity of the poverty-stricken to take active roles in the development and carrying out of programs.

"Leadership training programs will train people in organizational techniques and give them a knowledge of community structure and resources so that they may more effectively press for needed action whether it is in the field of housing, education, welfare administration or other matters of concern."

Grandmother would never recognize city hall today. Everywhere, it is coming down the mountainside.

It can wave even more proudly, in fact: for our nation's increasing years have brought to our Flag constantly increasing cause for pride.

TRUE, THE ways of observing this birthday of our independence have changed. Gone is some of the boisterousness of other eras; the indiscriminate placing of loud and lethal fireworks in young hands has diminished; the riotous routs, for which the Fourth was only an excuse, have dwindled.

What remains means more than what we used to have. It contains more sincerity. The bands still play, and their airs are just as stirring as ever. The patriotic gatherings are still held. Audiences are still spellbound by speeches turned to the occasion.

Fourth of July picnics still are main events, whether they are colossal affairs prepared with tremendous effort in behalf of charity, or modest gatherings of families or groups of friends on relaxing outings.

WHATEVER FORM Sunday's observances were, there is a deep belief that there will be more realization of what is behind it all. That more minds will dwell on the greatness of our country, and on love for it.

In the past, just as now, there have been times when many Americans wondered if the United States was traveling the road to pride. In 1776 and the young years that followed there were strongly differing opinions about our course. During all our wars, and all our peacetime crises, there have been sincere, thoughtful citizens who were firmly convinced our country was headed for perdition.

BUT THE passage of time is a great analyzer. We know now that in the Revolutionary days, thanks to those true Americans who framed the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution and Bill of Rights, we got on the road to pride and stayed on it. In 1812, and in 1860, bitter as the schism was, we know now that our country took the right path.

In the war with Spain, the United States acted with humanity and justice. The first and second world wars, with all their dreadful carnage, brought further pride to our Flag because it never ceased to represent what was right.

Korea and its tragedies found us refusing to depart from the ways of national integrity -- always a cause for pride. Presently, Vietnam is an undermined situation, but we are clinging to the cause of proud principles.

There is no doubt that through the years more and more garlands of pride have been laid before the Stars and Stripes.

OUR COMMUNITY observed the 189th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. Dignity and patriotism in order.

The Flag was displayed at hundreds of our citizens' homes.

For the Fourth and our nation are as glorious as ever.

Our columnist Victor Riesel is about to take off for a series of news fronts which he believes need a new kind of coverage.

It was his behind-the-scenes reporting from Asia, Africa, Latin America and even in Europe which brought into the world spotlight the previously unnoticed men of real power who within a few months became international headline-makers.

Riesel digs them out by following his beat around the world. No coverage of American labor is complete without getting into the unreported news of international labor, or the new global unionism, or the U. S. labor leaders and contacts and activities abroad.

This is a new era for them. They spend millions of dollars on other continents. They have become the new jet set. They cooperate with "sister" unions in other lands and talk of international coordination on the industrial and strike fronts.

In many instances, men whom American labor has supported financially and politically have become ministers and leaders of the opposition parties. Many of these labor leaders today are in international diplomacy and are found frequently in the halls of the UN and Geneva "palaces."

Many, whom Riesel was the first to discover, have made grim headlines. In mid-August 1963, for example, after thousands of miles through Latin America, Riesel wound up in Santo Domingo and reported that the Dominican Republic was Fidel Castro's next target.

Your columnist warned then, long before any such reports came out of the island nation, that the world would soon learn that Communist cadres, built around labor action squads would move in that land. It happened.

During the trip, Riesel reported the activities of Juan Lechin in Bolivia and predicted that this miners' chief would lead a revolt. A few months ago, Lechin, with a labor army at his back, did just that.

Riesel was the first to report the infra-power structure of the Communist unions in Brazil. He predicted that this would be the base of a rebellion there. A year later, such a revolt started with a union hall as a headquarters. Fortunately it was put down by the present, pro-US. regime of President Branco.

Now Riesel is off for a labor reporting trip. This time with Santo Domingo in mind, Riesel will go deep into the smaller nations, the now obviously vital island republics, the "postage stamp countries" of the Caribbean and Central and Latin America. If any of these tiny lands ever are captured by Communist cadres, they would sound as loud as though they were a land mass the size of China.

In the tiny nations, control of the labor movements could mean control of the country. This story Riesel will seek out and report -- also the stores of labor - management cooperation against the Sino-Soviet - Castro operations.

To give Victor Riesel travel time and a chance to set up operations, some of the nation's most eminent leaders have agreed to answer with column - length statements vital questions put to them by Riesel.

Among these pinch - hitter "columnists" covering for Riesel are Secretary of Defense Robert A. McNamara; National Aeronautical and Space Administration Director James E. Webb; AFL- CIO President George Meany; Michigan's Governor George Romney; FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover; U. S. Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach; the world authority on cybernetics, John Diebold, who invented the word "automation"; W. P. Gullander, president of the National Assn. of Manufacturers; Dave Dubinsky, labor confidant of presidents, and Secy. of Commerce John Connor.

BIG PAD

The largest leaves in the world are those of the South American water lily known as the "Victoria Regia," named for Queen Victoria. The enormous floating pads may be almost forty feet around.

Colonel Hugh H. Waggoner, Superintendent of the Missouri Highway Patrol, today urged boating enthusiasts to use great caution when towing their craft on the State's highways.

Colonel Waggoner said: "Many pleasure boats will be traveling on the highways. I urge their owners to take every precaution to avoid a traffic accident.

"The Missouri Boat Commission has advised us that at the present time there are more than 57,000 boats registered in Missouri. They are constantly being towed to lakes or streams. I would like to remind motorists that any time a trailer of any description is in tow, they should use extra traffic caution."

Colonel Waggoner pointed out some of the Missouri Traffic Regulations regarding trailers hitched to automobiles. He said: "Missouri Traffic Regulations require that trailers have one red tail lamp visible 500 feet to the rear of the vehicle and one white lamp illuminating the license plate visible 50 feet to the rear."

The Patrol Superintendent also stated that an outside rear view mirror is required if the operator cannot see the road behind the trailer from inside the towing vehicle.

"The week of July 4 has been proclaimed National Safe Boating Week in Missouri by Governor Warren Hearnes," Colonel Waggoner concluded. "During this week and the rest of the summer, many watercraft will see service on our lakes and streams. I urge motorists to be alert of these towed boats on the highways. I also wish the owners of the crafts clear and safe sailing on the waterways."

Usually a cruise ship going to Iceland, India, South Africa, or around the world, announces a sailing date six months to a year, or even two years, before sailing. A schedule of calls is fixed, including a dozen or more shore excursions, and a price is put on each cabin and excursion.

Tourist cruises, which mean inexpensive cruises, are sold out two years in advance. People book luxury cruises six months ahead and women book dates with hairdressers aboard two months ahead. Table reservations are wangled long before sailing, as are the location of deck chairs. An innocent latecomer is apt to find himself a bit helpless.

Or are they the few who just plain refuse to be interviewed?

A BACK-PAT TO THE TEENS

Hail to the PROM SET -- The delightfully-wholesome couples who "do the town" at this time of each year. In an era marked by Beatles, Herman's Hermits and all other less-than-conventionally attired young people, it's a joy to see the lovely lasses in their first formals and their handsome escorts in spotless white dinner jackets. It can also be noted that the comportment of these young people is exemplary. If this practice of good-grooming leads to good manners -- and many people believe that the two go hand in hand -- then it's just too bad that the "Prom Set" doesn't have many, many more members, and that the "Prom Season" doesn't last much, much longer!

"You should know," she said blushingly, "You were in it!"

This proposed gun law in effect would hold the lawabiding citizens arms while two or more reds beat him up and robbed him, while the constitution with no ands or buts says The right to bear arms shall not be questioned. We can all see the difficulty and danger of law officers, but with the records now kept, the law could crack down on known crimnals that there would be few to take the chance with firearms. When and if this law takes effect, 10 per cent of our population as police would be too few to protect unarmed citizens.

H. L. Hunt Says

CIVIL SERVICE

The time has come to begin asking searching questions about an institution in our government often regarded as automatically "a good thing": the civil service system.

The civil service system was established more than three quarters of a century ago when, comparatively speaking, our government was a minnow in relation to the great whale it has since become. The making of government policy in those far-off days was a task a very small number of people could perform. The somewhat larger number who carried out the policies had nothing to do with making them, and there was no reason why they should not be kept permanently on the job.

But today, professional civil servants fill many vital policy-making positions in Washington. They staff the "middle echelon" of the State Department and related agencies where vital decisions are made concerning our nation's safety. They regulate many of the nation's businesses. They gather statistics on which our whole national economic policy is based.

Holding critical positions, hostile civil servants can effectively undermine any policy they dislike while effectively promoting policies they do like, regardless of the wishes of their appointed superiors. Yet under civil service regulations, it is almost impossible to remove even the most obstructive.

Serious consideration should be given to removing the nearly absolute guarantee of job security from those whose job involves the nation's security, and replacing it with a more fexible system which will insure that our policies are faithfully carried out.

For competent, faithful service, our civil servants deserve just compensation, but not a "right" to unending support by the taxpayers regardless of performance. HLH

DA NANG, South Viet Nam AP -- It all happened in 16 terrible minutes.

In that incredible fraction of an hour, a U. S. Air Force pilot napalm-bombed a target, his plane caught fire, he bailed out, landed in enemy territory and was plucked to safety by a passing Army helicopter.

"That's the only real emergency I've had in more than 4,000 hours in the air," said Capt. Edward F. Gallardo, 33, of Armstrong Creek, Wis.

"I feel much safer flying a jet plane than I do driving an automobile."

Ed is a dark-haired, F100 pilot who stands 5 feet 5, and weighs only 137 pounds. His wife, Pat, and their five children -- none of whom is more than 5 years old--live in Hampton, Va.

The fighter pilot's battle ordeal came on a recent Sunday when he had to skip morning religious services because of an early mission.

The mission was his 35th in some 40 days.

"I was first of our flight in on the target, some Viet Cong emplacements 42 miles south of here," said Gallardo. "I came in fast at 50 to 100 feet above the ground.

"I pushed what we call the pickle button to release the napalm cans. Immediately there was a loud explsion, and the cockpit filled with smoke. I didn't know whether I had been hit by ground fire, or something had gone wrong with the napalm.

"But I couldn't see out. My plane was on fire."

Instinctively, he put the plane into a climb.

"The smoke began to clear, but my plane was burning badly. I didn't know whether it would blow up or not. But you don't bail out over a target area if you can help it, and I headed toward the sea.

"I got up to 5,000 feet. At 6,000 feet the speed began to bleed down. The plane started to roll. The controls had burned away. I had become just a passenger, I had to go."

The captain jettisoned his canopy, pulled his triggers and was ejected.

"There was a big blast, and the next thing I knew I was floating down about 12 miles from the target area. It was a great view and I had plenty of time to think, but all I thought about was landing in a clear space."

Gallardo landed standing up between two houses in a native hamlet.

"I hit about 20 feet from a small boy," he said. "His eyes got big, he made a 180-degree turn and ran. I ran in the opposite direction toward a rice paddy, scattering dogs and chickens. I could be picked up there, but hide in the shrubbery around it if necessary."

Five planes circled protectively around his position and a pararescue team scrambled at the base here to get him. But an Army helicopter crew, apprised of his plight, picked him up.

"I wasn't on the ground more than five minutes," said the captain.

That afternoon at 5 o'clock the captain knelt at Mass in a chapel here.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Now that open fighting between Americans and Viet Cong has been decided on, Gen. William Westmoreland, U.S. commander in South Viet Nam, has urged the Pentagon to clarify who should be in command of the American troops on the battlefield.

The Americans have been sent to South Viet Nam to backstop the South Vietnamese, not command them. And Vietnamese officers will be offended if an American is placed in command over them. But Gen. Westmoreland also doesn't like the idea of leaving the fate of thousands of American GI's in the hands of less experienced South Vietnamese officers.

He wants a unified command under his control, even though it's a political affront to the South Vietnamese. Westmoreland is hopeful that some way can be worked out to keep American troops under U.S. command wherever they go into action. Partial command would be impractical, however, in a major battle, for whoever is directing a battle must have direct authority over all the troops.

Meanwhile the latest intelligence reports identify nine North Vietnamese battalions operating inside South Viet Nam. The buildup is so formidable that major battles could be launched at any time.

Some military advisers have recommended pulling all troops out of the remote guerrilla-controlled areas. This would shorten our supply lines and save isolated outposts from being overrun.

However, such withdrawal might be interpreted as weakness and seriously injure South Vietnamese morale.

—SON OF BOXING—

What does a young man do when he's the son of a famous heavyweight boxing champion and is elected to Congress? That is the question being asked about John Tunney, son of "Gentleman Gene" Tunney, who defeated Jack Dempsey to become world champion on Sept. 26, 1926.

Gene Tunney, whose home is in Connecticut, was a Republican. His son John, who represents the arid tip of Southern California, is a Democrat. The elder Tunney, however, switched last November to go all out for the Democrats — and his son.

This week young Tunney is doing what might be expected of a son of boxing and is holding hearings on a bill to clean up that sport. He proposes establishing a national boxing commission so that championship matches cannot be shopped around from state to state as the Liston-Clay fight was shopped from Miami to Boston, to Maine because other state commissions would not license it. A national boxing commission would prevent this, also ban boxers with ties in the underworld.

Young Congressman John Tunney has not stopped with legislation on boxing. He is pushing a national minimum wage of $1.25 for agricultural workers, despite opposition of the big Southern California ranchers; is urging improved living conditions for migrant workers and recently got $120,000 for bettering them in the Coachella Valley.

Tunney also proposes including hospital employees in the new Social Security bill, is plugging to keep $1,600,000 in the budget to build reservoirs in the Imperial Valley so that when farmers order water for irrigation purposes and on top of this it rains, they can impound their surplus water, not turn it loose in the desert.

—UNWANTED COLLEGE—

Most cities are delighted to be the home of a college. But Cape May, N.J., is battling to oust Shelton College, an institution of dubious learning founded by rabble-rousing Rev. Carl McIntire, the defrocked ex-Presbyterian minister.

The city council of Cape May and Mayor Frank Gauvry have voted to oust the college. However, Rev. McIntire has flatly refused to move it.

Recently McIntire wrote a letter to Mayor Gauvry inviting him to greet Sen. Strom Thurmond, the South Carolina Dixiecrat, "at a patriotic rally under our auspices. . .for individual freedom."

"In our controversy with you concerning Shelton College," said Rev. McIntire, "you said you did not approve of such speakers as the Senator when he was mentioned by name as coming to Cape May. We are especially desirous that you have this opportunity to meet this distinguished U.S. Senator and great Amgerican and also that in your capacity as a civic spokesman you greet the Senator.

"It will be conducive for better understanding and appreciation of the liberties which we enjoy as Americans," wrote McIntire.

Mayor Gauvry declined.

Meanwhile Shelton College is housed in the Christian Admiral Hotel, owned by McIntire, where he continues to be a thorn in the flesh of the city council.

Cape May authorities met with college authorities, asked if they intended to continue bringing such speakers as Gen. Edwin Walker, who retired from the Army after a squabble involving the teaching of John Birch literature to troops, and Sen. Thurmond. The college stated that it did so intend.

The institution has only one hundred students. Indications are that its accreditation will not be renewed. The Cape May city council has denied it rezoning, and the New Jersey Supreme Court has upheld the city.

Shelton College is now under orders to vacate the hotel by September, 1966. The city fathers of Cape May are anxious for education but not of this variety.

—UNDERGROUND WIRING—

A White House panel, headed by Walker Cisler of Detroit-Edison, has urged more underground electric wiring as part of the President's program to beautify America.

The panel commended progress in Los Angeles, where all electric utility service in new suburban areas is scheduled to be underground by the early 1970's.

However, due to the excessive costs of underground transmission, White House consultants suggest that aboveground electric wiring can be blended into surroundings in order to preserve natural beauty.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Reuther Moving to Train Nation's Poor for Action.

Washington, D. C.: -- In olden days when one's grandmother, newly arrived on these shores, sought for an expression of futility, she'd shrug her shoulders and in her best American-ese say: "You can't fight City Hall."

She was poor then. City Hall was the castle on the mountaintop. But the poor are different today. They are fighting city hall -- all over the land. They are well organized. They are a new social force.

Though still unnoticed, theirs is a social revolution, a challenge to the local "establishment" and to the old-line political leaders and, yes indeed, soon a challenge to America's labor leadership as well.

Those in the "Poverty" headquarters of Sargent Shriver here see it clearly.

So does the president Walt Reuther.

They see it coming not so much because of the distribution of millions of dollars to millions of people in seething tenement districts.

They see it, rather, as a result of the organization and training of the poor for leadership in the slum - jammed precincts of the nation's great cities.

Out of this will come an inner infra - structure of political strength which will be in the hands of proletarians still unknown.

There is much to "support the thesis that there is something of a social revolution in the making," one of Sargent Shriver's Office of Economic Opportunity highly - placed colleagues said to a friend the other day, "which has its implications for the 'local establishments' and, indeed, for labor organizations too."

He pointed out that his chief, Sargent Shriver, also refers to the development as a "social revolution," and noted that even the most liberal of mayors are disturbed by the poor's challenge to their City Hall power.

"This arises first out of the requirement in the Economic Opportunity Act that there be '. . . maximum feasible participation of residents of the areas and members of the corporations served' in community action program to eliminate poverty," he explained. "Therefore, the poor are re-enfranchised and are beginning to speak for themselves to constitute another voice to be reckoned with in civic affairs.

"It may well be that those of the poor who are being paid to help administer some of the anti - poverty programs will throw up from their ranks new leaders of a segment of our population -- the poor -- which totals 34.6 million throughout the nation."

Already there are some 45,000 paid poor involved in Project Head - Start alone. This is the eight-week summer training program for poor children who will enter school this fall.

There are more than 30,000 additional poor who will be paid employes of other community action programs by summer's end.

And this is just the beginning. Several hundred thousand more poor will be hired to work for and administer anti-poverty programs street by street, community by community.

On each local Community Action Agency's governing board there will be an average of 10 poor as policy-makers. These will total in the thousands eventually. They will be elected in their precincts. They, not the clubhouse leader, will become the poor's advocates -- at city hall and, soon, inside the labor movement.

Reuther has moved to meet this social challenge by joining with the challengers. Under his leadership and with a grant of auto union funds, he has launched the Citizens' Crusade Against Poverty. It now has a Washington headquarters and in August it will have a full time director.

Reuther's theme was struck in a recent statement. Characteristically, he said: "Plans for developing leadership potentials among the poor are based on the already demonstrated capacity of the poverty-stricken to take active roles in the development and carrying out of programs.

"Leadership training programs will train people in organizational techniques and give them a knowledge of community structure and resources so that they may more effectively press for needed action whether it is in the field of housing, education, welfare administration or other matters of concern."

Grandmother would never recognize city hall today. Everywhere, it is coming down the mountainside.

Braves Handed Problems By Astros

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Everything is going wrong for Milwaukee's slumping Braves these days. Now cleanup hitters are beating them with squeeze bunts.

The Houston Astros pulled a rare bit of strategy by having big Walt Bond bunt over a tie-breaking run in the ninth inning for a 5-4 victory over the Braves Monday night.

"We're just snake bit, losing every way possible," All-Star catcher Joe Torre said after the Braves' ninth defeat in the last 11 games. "Every mistake, even a walk, costs us a run."

Held to three hits for seven innings by Dick Farrell, the Braves exploded to tie the count with the help of a two-run homer by Torre, his 17th, and a solo blast by Hank Aaron. The homer was Aaron's 14th of the year and No. 380 of his career.

Then Houston Manager Lum Harris crossed up the Braves, who failed again in an effort to put together two straight victories for the first time since June 13.

BATTING — Ron Swoboda, New York, hit two homers and drove in five runs as the Mets swept a doubleheader from the Chicago Cubs 3-2 and 3-0.

BOYNTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) —Dick Wilson, 62, one of the nation's top golf course architects, died at a Boynton Beach hospital Monday.

Wounded Meet At St. Andrews For British Open

SOUTHPORT, England AP -- The word went out today among the ranks of the world's greatest golfers:

"Watch out for the walking wounded. They'll beat you."

A half dozen of the top stars in the field of 130 that has gathered for the British Open are complaining of health problems of one sort or another.

Arnold Palmer, who won the Open on Royal Birkdale's 7,037-yard par 73 course four years ago, wore a turtle neck sweater against chill winds which might further damage a sore throat he has been bothered with for several dys.

Bruce Devlin of Australia had such a bad throat he even had it X-rayed in case there was some foreign body lodged there. It wasn't.

Kel Nagle, fellow Australian who was runner-up in the U.S. Open this year and won the British Crown at St. Andrews in 1960, had a sore back.

So did Bob Charles of New Zealand, the 1963 champion.

The Birkdale Club lined up a local physiotherapist to tend them.

Defending champion Tony Lema of San Leandro, Calif., breezed in Monday, back to his playing weight of 175 after he started smoking again to reduce from 195.

But Lema recalled a stomach upset he had last year in England and said "I hope that doesn't show up again."

Gary Player, the little South African who won the American was pleased that the winds were blowing in off the Irish Sea.

"My hay fever, you know," he said.

Everyboey in the star studded field seemed able and willing to have something wrong with them, except Jack Nicklaus, who is the 3-1 favorite to win his first British Open, the only major championship that has eluded the Golden Bear.

"I'm fine," he said with a big smile. "And I'm desperate to win this one."

In his tuneups for the 72 hole medal play which starts Wednesday and ends Friday, Nicklaus had a special look at the 468 yard par-4 sixth hole.

"It's the worst hole," he said. "It's all right for power hitters like myself, Palmer and some others and I can play it. But it must be powered."

Swoboda Slugs For Mets

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Swoboda has a Chinese step-grandfather but there's nothing Oriental about his home runs.

When the New York Mets' slugging outfielder gets good wood on a pitch there's little doubt about the ball's destination. None of those cheap home runs — sometimes called Chinese homers — for him.

The Baltimore native crashed a couple on the nose Monday and in both instances the Chicago outfielders didn't even bother to turn around.

Swoboda hit his first homer in the first inning of the opener, off southpaw Dick Ellsworth. There were two on base and that was all the Mets needed to win 3-2.

The 21-year-old homered again his first time at bat in the nightcap. This one came off right-hander Bill Faul with Ed Kranepool on base and started the Mets to a 3-0 victory.

The homers were No. 14 and 15 for Swoboda, who bettered the club's record for a rookie, 13 by Jim Hickman in 1962.

Although he had driven in five of the Mets' six runs, Swoboda was slightly annoyed at being lifted for defensive purposes in the late innings of each game.

"He doesn't want to come out," said Manager Casey Stengel. "You got to yell at him a couple of times."

Lopez Picks Three Yanks On A.L. Squad

BOSTON AP -- Three Minnesota Twins and three New York Yankees were among nine picked for the 1965 American League All-Star team Tuesday by Manager Al Lopez of Chicago.

The Yankees, shut out in the balloting for the starters in the annual All-Star clash at Minnesota July 13, will be represented by catcher Elston Howard, second baseman Bobby Richardson and outfielder Mickey Mantle.

This was the 14th All-Star selection for the ailing Mantle, making him the senior on the team announced by American League headquarters.

Chosen to join Minnesota's Earl Battey, the starting catcher selected in a poll of Al players, coaches and managers, were shortstop Zoilo Versalles, first baseman Harmon Killebrew and outfielder Jimmy Hall.

Also named by Lopez were third baseman Max Alvis of Cleveland and outfielders Al Kaline of Detroit and Carl Yastrzemski of Boston.

As the All-Star manager, Lopez must also name the pitching corps -- to be announced Friday.

Lopez followed the choices of the poll, and all those named were runners-up in the balloting, except Mantle.

Since all 10 AL teams must be represented on the All-Star squad, Lopez must select pitchers from Kansas City, Washington and Los Angeles among his eight choices.

FIRE FABLE

When man first learned the use of fire,
He experimented, and found
He was warmer, his home was drier,
His meat was tasty when golden brown.
He moved his fire into the shelter,
And soon had a fireplace;
So, after the invention of this melter
He became a civilized race.
All that happened in one million B. C.,
But now a strange evolution we're going through;
He's taking the fire back outside,
And calling it barbecue.

A MODERN ELECTRONIC ENGINE PERFORMANCE ANALYSIS
IS LIKE A DOCTOR'S X-RAY

When you go to your Doctor for a checkup, he usually insists on an X-ray, to determine the exact condition of the vital organs that control body processes.
An electronic diagnosis of your engine and its electrical system is like an X-ray in that it determines the exact condition of each part and component that controls car performance.
Many vital engine parts are out of sight. It is impossible, for example, to see the action of the distributor points under actual working conditions. However, with our modern Rotunda Electronic Diagnosis Equipment, the exact condition of all such hidden parts is clearly indicated on the oscilloscope screen. Nothing is left to guesswork — nothing is overlooked.
Let our trained diagnosis technicians give you a complete report on every phase of your engine's performance. It will pay big dividends in helping you to avoid future trouble.

Chosen to join Minnesota's Earl Battey, the starting catcher selected in a poll of Al players, coaches and managers, were shortstop Zollo Versalles, first baseman Harmon Killebrew and outfielder Jimmy Hall.

Also named by Lopez were third baseman Max Alvis of Cleveland and outfielders Al Kaline of Detroit and Carl Yastrzemski of Boston.

As the All-Star manager, Lopez must also name the pitching corps -- to be announced Friday.

Lopez followed the choices of the poll, and all those named were runners-up in the balloting, except Mantle.

Since all 10 AL teams must be represented on the All-Star squad, Lopez must select pitchers from Kansas City, Washington and Los Angeles among his eight choices.

FIRE FABLE

When man first learned the use of fire,
He experimented, and found
He was warmer, his home was drier,
His meat was tasty when golden brown.
He moved his fire into the shelter,
And soon had a fireplace;
So, after the invention of this melter
He became a civilized race.
All that happened in one million B. C.,
But now a strange evolution we're going through;
He's taking the fire back outside,
And calling it barbecue.

Bertrand Stops Scott City, In 4 to 3 Thriller

Bertrand's Connie Mackers picked up their second win in a row, picking off a tough Scott City team, with a 4 to 3 victory.

Bertrand pitcher Brooks and Sexton limited the Scott City team to 7 hits in the contest. Sexton did an excellent job of relief pitching. He came in in the third inning, with the bases loaded and one man out. He retired the next two hitters, to snuff a Scott City rally.

Brunderman and Alcorn took care of the power-hitting for Bertrand. Brunderman banged a triple, while centerfielder Alcorn poked a third inning double.

Ulmer and D. McSwain took care of the pitching chores for Scott City. Pete Ulmer was the losing pitcher. The two Scott City hurlers limited Bertrand to only five hits in the game.

Bertrand and Scott City are slated to tangle again Thursday night, on Bertrand's home diamond.

Braves Handed Problems By Astros

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Everything is going wrong for Milwaukee's slumping Braves these days. Now cleanup hitters are beating them with squeeze bunts.

The Houston Astros pulled a rare bit of strategy by having big Walt Bond bunt over a tie-breaking run in the ninth inning for a 5-4 victory over the Braves Monday night.

"We're just snake bit, losing every way possible," All-Star catcher Joe Torre said after the Braves' ninth defeat in the last 11 games. "Every mistake, even a walk, costs us a run."

Held to three hits for seven innings by Dick Farrell, the Braves exploded to tie the count with the help of a two-run homer by Torre, his 17th, and a solo blast by Hank Aaron. The homer was Aaron's 14th of the year and No. 380 of his career.

Then Houston Manager Lum Harris crossed up the Braves, who failed again in an effort to put together two straight victories for the first time since June 13.

Wounded Meet At St. Andrews For British Open

SOUTHPORT, England AP -- The word went out today among the ranks of the world's greatest golfers:

"Watch out for the walking wounded. They'll beat you."

A half dozen of the top stars in the field of 130 that has gathered for the British Open are complaining of health problems of one sort or another.

Arnold Palmer, who won the Open on Royal Birkdale's 7,037-yard par 73 course four years ago, wore a turtle neck sweater against chill winds which might further damage a sore throat he has been bothered with for several dys.

Bruce Devlin of Australia had such a bad throat he even had it X-rayed in case there was some foreign body lodged there. It wasn't.

Kel Nagle, fellow Australian who was runner-up in the U.S. Open this year and won the British Crown at St. Andrews in 1960, had a sore back.

So did Bob Charles of New Zealand, the 1963 champion.

The Birkdale Club lined up a local physiotherapist to tend them.

Defending champion Tony Lema of San Leandro, Calif., breezed in Monday, back to his playing weight of 175 after he started smoking again to reduce from 195.

But Lema recalled a stomach upset he had last year in England and said "I hope that doesn't show up again."

Gary Player, the little South African who won the American was pleased that the winds were blowing in off the Irish Sea.

"My hay fever, you know," he said.

Everyboey in the star studded field seemed able and willing to have something wrong with them, except Jack Nicklaus, who is the 3-1 favorite to win his first British Open, the only major championship that has eluded the Golden Bear.

"I'm fine," he said with a big smile. "And I'm desperate to win this one."

In his tuneups for the 72 hole medal play which starts Wednesday and ends Friday, Nicklaus had a special look at the 468 yard par-4 sixth hole.

"It's the worst hole," he said. "It's all right for power hitters like myself, Palmer and some others and I can play it. But it must be powered."

Swoboda Slugs For Mets

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Swoboda has a Chinese stepgrandfather but there's nothing Oriental about his home runs.

When the New York Mets' slugging outfielder gets good wood on a pitch there's little doubt about the ball's destination. None of those cheap home runs — sometimes called Chinese homers — for him.

The Baltimore native crashed a couple on the nose Monday and in both instances the Chicago outfielders didn't even bother to turn around.

Swoboda hit his first homer in the first inning of the opener, off southpaw Dick Ellsworth. There were two on base and that was all the Mets needed to win 3-2.

The 21-year-old homered again his first time at bat in the nightcap. This one came off right-hander Bill Faul with Ed Kranepool on base and started the Mets to a 3-0 victory.

The homers were No. 14 and 15 for Swoboda, who bettered the club's record for a rookie, 13 by Jim Hickman in 1962.

Although he had driven in five of the Mets' six runs, Swoboda was slightly annoyed at being lifted for defensive purposes in the late innings of each game.

"He doesn't want to come out," said Manager Casey Stengel. "You got to yell at him a couple of times."

A MODERN ELECTRONIC ENGINE PERFORMANCE ANALYSIS IS LIKE A DOCTOR'S X-RAY

When you go to your Doctor for a checkup, he usually insists on an X-ray, to determine the exact condition of the vital organs that control body processes.
An electronic diagnosis of your engine and its electrical system is like an X-ray in that it determines the exact condition of each part and component that controls car performance.
Many vital engine parts are out of sight. It is impossible, for example, to see the action of the distributor points under actual working conditions. However, with our modern Rotunda Electronic Diagnosis Equipment, the exact condition of all such hidden parts is clearly indicated on the oscilloscope screen. Nothing is left to guess work — nothing is overlooked.
Let our trained diagnosis technicians give you a complete report on every phase of your engine's performance. It will pay big dividends in helping you to avoid future trouble.

Five Die In Bus Car-Crash

WATERLOO, N.Y. (AP) —An eastbound Greyhound bus and an automobile collided on the New York Thruway today, killing five persons in the car and injuring 35 to 40 on the bus.

The bus passengers were not reported seriously injured.

Reporters at the scene said the westbound car had crossed the center mall of the rain-slick superhighway and hit the bus head-on.

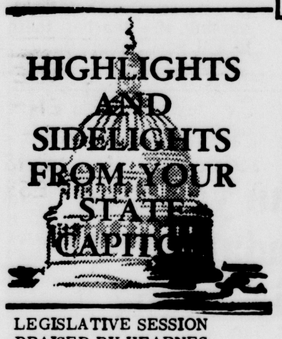

The bus careened into a small ravine and fire broke out in the rear.

The car disintegrated in the passing lane on the eastbound side.

The impact ripped the left side of the bus, and baggage was strewn over the highway.

The accident occurred about two miles west of this community between Rochester and Syracuse.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION PRAISED BY HEARNES

By Edward Collier

Nearly all programs advocated by Governor Warren E. Hearnes before the 43rd General Assembly back in January swept through the recently ended session which saw the assembly heaped with praise from Missouri's youthful governor.

In fact, the governor made the unprecedented move of appearing before both chambers in the final moments of the session to praise legislators personally for their efforts over the past six months.

REAPPORTIONMENT

Even before the legislature met in January, there were signs and even open discussion of the fact that little could be expected from this session because of the squabble that would arise over court-ordered reapportionment and redistricting.

However, despite heated debate and lengthy oratory, both were finally accomplished, but it will be some time before it's known whether the plans brought out by the legislature will suit federal authority.

The size of the house is to be increased to 168 members if the voters approve a constitutional change August 17. At the same election, voters also will be balloting on the proposal possibly most dear to Hearnes' heart, gubernatorial succession; and a measure to allow communities to sell property financed under bonds after such bonds are retired.

CIVIL RIGHTS

In the area of Civil Rights, programs advocated by the governor to place Missouri in line with federal statutes were accepted. Also, another point was to strengthen the present Commission on Human Rights through budgetary means.

Heretofore, the commission had been saddled with an extremely low budget which allowed for hardly any action. This budget now has been doubled and the staff, in anticipation of the large increase, already has been upped considerably.

A new public accommodations law which deals with racial discrimination in nearly all phases of public commerce (except beauty and barber shops) was agreed upon along with a fair employment practices measure which is aimed at keeping the federal government out of Missouri racial affairs.

TRAFFIC SAFETY

Most Missouri governors long have been concerned with the rapidly growing number of traffic accidents and fatalities on state highways and the legislature has taken several steps to help lessen this number.

Among the steps taken were ones to increase the number of highway patrolmen, requirement of visual testing on license renewal and the most important, the chemical test for drunkenness.

The latter is an implied consent measure whereby an applicant for a driver's license is held automatically to have given his consent to be tested for drunkenness while driving if reasonable grounds exist.

Another measure strengthening the hand of the state Highway Patrol allows the use of radar-equipped planes, where the arresting officer on the ground did not actually see the speeding offense occur.

GROSS RECEIPTS TAX

In order to correct a situation created by the state sales tax, the General Assembly was asked to revamp the program into what is commonly called a gross receipts tax. To most people it will have little effect, except the bracketing system has been dropped to provide for the sales tax to start at 15 cents.

Most affected, of course, are vending machine operators who now must pay a three per cent tax on their gross sales. The previous system was held invalid in the courts as it did not specify that it was to tax vendors on the gross receipts.

COUNCIL ON THE ARTS

New York has ably demonstrated that a state council on the arts can be operated at a minimal cost while upgrading the state's cultural heritage. Thus, the General Assembly was asked by Governor Hearnes to place Missouri in a similar position, and he won out, although the initial appropriations request was whacked from a suggested $250,000 to $170,000 but many feel this is a real step in the right direction.

OTHER MEASURES

Other measures enacted by the legislature and accepted by the governor will create an air pollution study program; put into action a conflict of interest law aimed primarily at lobbyists with members of the legislature and the executive branch all but exempted; increases the state Highway Commission from four to six (this was a bill even the governor had all but given up hope on); increase by some $10 million the school foundation law; and set up four-year educational programs at Joplin and St. Joseph.

The governor, however, lost out on a proposal calling for a sharp reduction to a simple majority the margin needed for passage of general obligation bonds. A measure providing for a 60 per cent majority narrowly missed, being lodged in the Senate when final adjournment came.

From blossoms to beaches, there is no place quite like southwestern Michigan in springtime. Twin cities Benton Harbor and St. Joseph, in the heart of the rich fruit belt, each year hold a gala Blossom Festival complete with queens and grand parade.

The Magic Circle route north along the shoreline offers glimpses of high wooded cliffs that shelter long stretches of sandy beaches. Popular is the old resort town of Saugatuck for antique shops, a picturesque waterfront, summer stock theater, and exciting roller-coaster rides over the giant sand hills in dune schooners.

Springtime in Holland is fittingly gay with some two million tulips in bloom. Settled by Dutch immigrants, remnants of the original "kolonie" are on display in the Netherlands Museum. At the Wooden Shoe Factory you can be fitted with a pair of klompen—some 20,000 pairs fashioned by hand are turned out annually.

Grand Rapids, furniture capital and regional shopping center, boasts a fine furniture museum portraying the craft that made the city famous, plus many parks and Indian burial mounds. A new superhighway leads south to Kalamazoo, whose park-like Burdick Mall for pedestrians has put new life into the downtown business area with fountains, flowers, grass, and soft recorded music.

Your windshield becomes a pastel-covered movie screen on the return trip via Interstate 94 through the blooming Van Buren County fruit orchards.

Newport Jazz Festival Is Small And Peaceful

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) —Attendance at the 12th Newport Jazz Festival continues small and peaceful. There have been no signs so far that a repeat of the 1960 riots is in the making.

Police arrested 22 persons Thursday night on a variety of minor violations ranging from revelry and littering to violating liquor laws.

Friday night there were 52 arrests, for similar minor infractions.

About 8,500 turned out Friday night for the second evening session of the four-day festival at the big field at Connell Highway where more than 12,000 seats have been set out.

Police at the festival gates checked women patron's handbags and men's clothing to be sure no liquor or weapons were carried in.

An advance sale of more than 45,000 tickets for the seven performances has put the festival on a sound fiscal footing.

Sellout crowds are expected tonight and Sunday night. That's when the big names come in, notably Duke Ellington and Dave Brubeck tonight and Frank Sinatra Sunday night, the closing performance.

Authorities have banned sleeping on beaches this year, and those traditional sandy dormitories for thousands of youngsters at past festivals have been bare and calm.

Santa Busy In Summer Counseling Youngsters

SANTA CLAUS, Ind. AP--What does Santa Claus do in the summer?

Mainly, he talks to youngsters. He asks them if they have been saying their prayers and sharing the toys and happiness he brought them last year.

From Easter to Christmas Eve, this tiny southern Indiana hamlet is Santa Claus Land.

An estimated 500,000 persons this year will visit the town, which traces its history to a group of settlers in the mid-19th century and now enjoys one of the nation's most famous postmarks.

Those who come here, adults and children alike, will be greeted with a hearty "Ho, ho, ho" by Jim Yellig, who has played Santa Claus for nearly 46 years.

Yellig, 72, refuses to step out of character. "This is my life," he says with a twinkle topping his snowy beard.

Since 1930, Yellig has been a full-time Santa. The 120 employes who man the 200-acre Santa Claus Land know him by no other name.

"Lots of kiddies ask me why I'm not at the North Pole," he says. "Well, I tell them I used to be but no one ever came to visit me there."

In winter, when snow drapes the amusement park, the pioneer and Indian villages and the toy museum, the visitors thin out.

The Santa Claus post office annually handles four million pieces of mail, with help from the local American Legion.

The town's population is only 38.

Years ago, a small group of settlers migrated to the gentle rolling hills here to build their log cabins.

On Christmas Eve in 1852, the settlers met in the Salem Methodist church to choose a name for their village. They were irked because the government had rejected a request that the community be named Santa Fe. There already was a town by that name, Washington pointed out.

As they deliberated, the jingle of bells was heard outside.

"Santa Claus!" shouted the village children. "It's Santa Claus!" One of the settlers portraying St. Nick had arrived with his bag of presents.

The townspeople quickly voted the name for their village.

In the 114 years since, Santa Claus land has grown to a $750,000-a-year business.

Children tugging at their parents' hands come to meet Santa Claus and get in an early word on what they hope to find beneath the Christmas tree.

"I never promise them anything," says Yellig. "But I tell them all I will do the best I can."

Accuses U. S. Of Blackmail

MOSCOW AP -- Leonid I. Brezhnev accused the United States today of nuclear blackmail by claiming it has more nuclear - armed intercontinental missiles than the Soviet Union.

The number of Soviet missiles is "perfectly sufficient to finish off once and for all any aggressor or any group of aggressors," the first secretary of the Soviet Communist party told military officers at the Kremlin.

"We are satisfied with our rockets," he said, in an account of his speech distributed by the official news agency Tass.

"We have achieved important successes in the creation of antimissile defense facilities. Further important steps were taken lately, which raised their efficiency sharply."

The United States announced Wednesday that it had 800 Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missiles in firing position.

Intelligence reports available in Washington said the Soviet Union had about 270 intercontinental missiles.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I was undecided as to whether I should write to you or run an ad in the classified section of this paper. You see, I have a slightly used boy friend I'd like to get rid of. He broke his leg skiing last November and I can't get him out of my apartment.

The young man is 32, unmarried, handsome in a rugged, Irish way, 6 feet tall, a superb dancer, doesn't drink or smoke (too much) and he is a writer by profession. This is part of the problem. He writes checks on our joint account to which he has contributed nothing for eight months.

When he broke his leg I made the horrible mistake of letting him move into the second bedroom. I wouldn't feel right about throwing him out in the street. An ideal solution would be to find him another home. I'm signing my name, and telephone number in the hope that someone will take this charming moocher off my hands -- and I am not kidding. -- MISS ---. MURRYHILL. ------

Dear ---: Sorry, I can't print your name and telephone number. First, it's against the rules of this column to put one reader in touch with another. Second, I'm afraid you'd be deluged with offers.

All some dames need to know is that a man is 6 feet tall, handsome and a superb dancer and they will try to grab him -- secure in the knowledge that they can overlook his petty faults and turn him into an ideal husband overnight. So, Doll -- no deal.

Dear Ann Landers: Last night a friend and I went to a TV studio to see a give-away show. Several people from the audience volunteered to compete for prizes. I was horrified when a woman who was about eight and a half months pregnant got up on the stage. She looked as if she was going to have twins for sure --maybe triplets.

The master of ceremonies said, "I hope you win something you can use in your condition." The woman won two pairs of skates. Everyone in the audience roared.

The M. C. kept repeating, "in your condition" as if he had to point out to the audience what her condition was. My friend thought this was very funny. I was appalled. Don't you think it was tasteless for the host of the show to exploit the woman this way? Although she was good natured about it I'll bet she felt awful. I'd like your opinion. -- HOUSE DIVIDED.

Dear House: The woman knew she was pregnant when she volunteered to get on the stage. This type of show lives on exploitation -- and she invited it. So save your sympathy.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a wife and two daughters. If you walked into our bathroom at any hour of the day or night you'd think I had a harem of 20. Across the shower rod hang about 15 pairs of nylons, a dozen pairs of unmentionables, and eighteen bras.

Whenever I want to take a shower I have to hack my way through this jungle of underwear. It burns me up.

My wife has a washer-dryer in the utility room and a clothes line in the basement. If you can give me one good reason for these females to clutter up the bathroom like this I'll shut up. Thank you. -- NO MAN'S LAND

Dear No Man: It's easier to suds undies in the bathroom sink than to trek down to the utility room and put them in a machine. Furthermore, elasticized garments last longer if they are laundered by hand.

If you hate fighting underwear at shower time your wife ought to do her hand laundry early in the day and have the rods clear when you come home.

Youth Corps Gives Picture Of Poverty

JEFFERSON CITY AP--The teenage girl looked tired when she came to work and her supervisor, Mrs. Carol Mills, asked if anything was wrong.

"The roof leaked when it rained last night," she explained. "It kept dripping on my bed."

This sort of story can be retold--with endless variations--by supervisors of the newly established Neighborhood Youth Corps. Missouri's Youth Corps program is providing local jobs for 11,769 persons for 10 weeks this summer.

The great majority of the workers live in outstate areas. St. Louis, Kansas City and many smaller communities have their own job projects.

What kind of youths are involved? To find out, an Associated Press writer talked to some of them and their supervisors on the Cole County project.

One boy, a high school sophomore, has two withered arms from a childhood bout with polio. One day recently his supervisor found him working during the lunch break. The boy said he was slower than the others and wanted to catch up.

"At first I had a hard time understanding the instructions," he says, "But I'm getting better."

He is enjoying his first job--filing cards in a state office. His mother said he wanted to get a job before, but she kept him from applying because she was afraid he'd be turned down.

Another worker, a 16-year-old girl, has poor eyesight. A supervisor saw her squinting at papers she was filing and suggested glasses.

"Well uh how much would they cost?" the girl stammered. She was assured they'd be free, paid for by a state agency. Free eye examinations are being provided in various parts of the state for the Youth Corps.

Later the supervisor recalled the first meal the girl bought with her own money--a chocolate cupcake and a piece of chocolate pie. Gradually she has been encouraged to buy balanced meals.

Supervisors put in extra hours counseling their workers. They talk to some about grooming and work habits. If a youth shows interest in going to college, they tell him about enrolling procedure and the probable costs.

"Some of these kids are so poor," says Frank Iuen, Jr., one of the supervisors for Cole County, "one boy showed up for outdoor work with nothing for lunch but a piece of lettuce between two slices of bread."

Iuen and other supervisors stayed up until 10 p.m., recently completing the first payroll. County supervisors throughout the state get $140 a week, project supervisors under them get $120 and the Youth Corps members get $1.25 an hour for 30 hours a week, not including counseling session.

Pay for the 10 weeks comes from about $5,250,000 in federal funds under the war on poverty program. The state chips in about $580,000 more, according to Philip V. Maher, the governor's assistant for urban affairs.

Corps members must be between the ages of 16-21. They qualify under economic brackets that start with families of four or less earning no more than $2,880 a year, with $360 for each additional family member.

Five Die In Bus Car-Crash

WATERLOO, N.Y. (AP) —An eastbound Greyhound bus and an automobile collided on the New York Thruway today, killing five persons in the car and injuring 35 to 40 on the bus.

The bus passengers were not reported seriously injured.

The bus was bound for Boston, either from Cleveland or Chicago and had stopped in Rochester.

Reporters at the scene said the westbound car had crossed the center mall of the rain-slick superhighway and hit the bus head-on.

The bus careened into a small ravine and fire broke out in the rear.

The car disintegrated in the passing lane on the eastbound side.

The impact ripped the left side of the bus, and baggage was strewn over the highway.

The accident occurred about two miles west of this community between Rochester and Syracuse.

HIGHLIGHTS AND SIDELIGHTS FROM YOUR STATE CAPITOL

By Edward Collier

LEGISLATIVE SESSION PRAISED BY HEARNES

Nearly all programs advocated by Governor Warren E. Hearnes before the 43rd General Assembly back in January swept through the recently ended session which saw the assembly heaped with praise from Missouri's youthful governor.

In fact, the governor made the unprecedented move of appearing before both chambers in the final moments of the session to praise legislators personally for their efforts over the past six months.

REAPPORTIONMENT

Even before the legislature met in January, there were signs and even open discussion of the fact that little could be expected from this session because of the squabble that would arise over court-ordered reapportionment and redistricting.

However, despite heated debate and lengthy oratory, both were finally accomplished, but it will be some time before it's known whether the plans brought out by the legislature will suit federal authority.

The size of the house is to be increased to 168 members if the voters approve a constitutional change August 17. At the same election, voters also will be balloting on the proposal possibly most dear to Hearnes' heart, gubernatorial succession; and a measure to allow communities to sell property financed under bonds after such bonds are retired.

CIVIL RIGHTS

In the area of Civil Rights, programs advocated by the governor to place Missouri in line with federal statutes were accepted. Also, another point was to strengthen the present Commission on Human Rights through budgetary means.

Heretofore, the commission had been saddled with an extremely low budget which allowed for hardly any action. This budget now has been doubled and the staff, in anticipation of the large increase, already has been upped considerably.

A new public accommodations law which deals with racial discrimination in nearly all phases of public commerce (except beauty and barber shops) was agreed upon along with a fair employment practices measure which is aimed at keeping the federal government out of Missouri racial affairs.

TRAFFIC SAFETY

Most Missouri governors long have been concerned with the rapidly growing number of traffic accidents and fatalities on state highways and the legislature has taken several steps to help lessen this number.

Among the steps taken were ones to increase the number of highway patrolmen, requirement of visual testing on license renewal and the most important, the chemical test for drunkenness.

The latter is an implied consent measure whereby an applicant for a driver's license is held automatically to have given his consent to be tested for drunkenness while driving if reasonable grounds exist.

Another measure strengthening the hand of the state Highway Patrol allows the use of radar-equipped planes, where the arresting officer on the ground did not actually see the speeding offense occur.

GROSS RECEIPTS TAX

In order to correct a situation created by the state sales tax, the General Assembly was asked to revamp the program into what is commonly called a gross receipts tax. To most people it will have little effect, except the bracketing system has been dropped to provide for the sales tax to start at 15 cents.

Most affected, of course, are vending machine operators who now must pay a three per cent tax on their gross sales. The previous system was held invalid in the courts as it did not specify that it was to tax vendors on the gross receipts.

COUNCIL ON THE ARTS

New York has ably demonstrated that a state council on the arts can be operated at a minimal cost while upgrading the state's cultural heritage. Thus, the General Assembly was asked by Governor Hearnes to place Missouri in a similar position, and he won out, although the initial appropriations request was whacked from a suggested $250,000 to $170,000 but many feel this is a real step in the right direction.

OTHER MEASURES

Other measures enacted by the legislature and accepted by the governor will create an air pollution study program; put into action a conflict of interest law aimed primarily at lobbyists with members of the legislature and the executive branch all but exempted; increases the state Highway Commission from four to six (this was a bill even the governor had all but given up hope on); increase by some $10 million the school foundation law; and set up four-year educational programs at Joplin and St. Joseph.

The governor, however, lost out on a proposal calling for a sharp reduction to a simple majority the margin needed for passage of general obligation bonds. A measure providing for a 60 per cent majority narrowly missed, being lodged in the Senate when final adjournment came.

From blossoms to beaches, there is no place quite like southwestern Michigan in springtime. Twin cities Benton Harbor and St. Joseph, in the heart of the rich fruit belt, each year hold a gala Blossom Festival complete with queens and grand parade.

The Magic Circle route north along the shoreline offers glimpses of high wooded cliffs that shelter long stretches of sandy beaches. Popular is the old resort town of Saugatuck for antique shops, a picturesque waterfront, summer stock theater, and exciting roller-coaster rides over the giant sand hills in dune schooners.

Springtime in Holland is fittingly gay with some two million tulips in bloom. Settled by Dutch immigrants, remnants of the original "kolonie" are on display in the Netherlands Museum. At the Wooden Shoe Factory you can be fitted with a pair of klompen—some 20,000 pairs fashioned by hand are turned out annually.

Grand Rapids, furniture capital and regional shopping center, boasts a fine furniture museum portraying the craft that made the city famous, plus many parks and Indian burial mounds. A new superhighway leads south to Kalamazoo, whose park-like Burdick Mall for pedestrians has put new life into the downtown business area with fountains, flowers, grass, and soft recorded music.

Your windshield becomes a pastel-covered movie screen on the return trip via Interstate 94 through the blooming Van Buren County fruit orchards.

Newport Jazz Festival Is Small And Peaceful

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Attendance at the 12th Newport Jazz Festival continues small and peaceful. There have been no signs so far that a repeat of the 1960 riots is in the making.

Police arrested 22 persons Thursday night on a variety of minor violations ranging from revelry and littering to violating liquor laws.

Friday night there were 52 arrests, for similar minor infractions.

About 8,500 turned out Friday night for the second evening session of the four-day festival at the big field at Connell Highway where more than 12,000 seats have been set out.

Police at the festival gates checked women patron's handbags and men's clothing to be sure no liquor or weapons were carried in.

An advance sale of more than 45,000 tickets for the seven performances has put the festival on a sound fiscal footing.

Sellout crowds are expected tonight and Sunday night. That's when the big names come in, notably Duke Ellington and Dave Brubeck tonight and Frank Sinatra Sunday night, the closing performance.

Authorities have banned sleeping on beaches this year, and those traditional sandy dormitories for thousands of youngsters at past festivals have been bare and calm.

Santa Busy In Summer Counseling Youngsters

SANTA CLAUS, Ind. AP--What does Santa Claus do in the summer?

Mainly, he talks to youngsters. He asks them if they have been saying their prayers and sharing the toys and happiness he brought them last year.

From Easter to Christmas Eve, this tiny southern Indiana hamlet is Santa Claus Land.

An estimated 500,000 persons this year will visit the town, which traces its history to a group of settlers in the mid-19th century and now enjoys one of the nation's most famous postmarks.

Those who come here, adults and children alike, will be greeted with a hearty "Ho, ho, ho" by Jim Yellig, who has played Santa Claus for nearly 46 years.

Yellig, 72, refuses to step out of character. "This is my life," he says with a twinkle topping his snowy beard.

Since 1930, Yellig has been a full-time Santa. The 120 employes who man the 200-acre Santa Claus Land know him by no other name.

"Lots of kiddies ask me why I'm not at the North Pole," he says. "Well, I tell them I used to be but no one ever came to visit me there."

In winter, when snow drapes the amusement park, the pioneer and Indian villages and the toy museum, the visitors thin out.

Campbell Approves New Water Tower

CAMPBELL -- Mayor W. A. Cruse has announced that the city of Campbell has approved a bid for the purchase and erection of a new water storage tank and tower.

Lower bids approved by the councilmen were for $33,530 for the tank and tower, to be erected by the Pittsburg-Des Moines Steel Col. of Des Moines, Iowa; and $2,215 by the Stites Concrete, Inc., of Dexter for the concrete footings.

The contractors have 180 days, or six months, to complete the work. The new water tank will be erected 500 feet north of the old water tank, in order to be nearer the city's second largest artesian well. The old tank will later be completely rebuilt and will remain in service, Mayor Cruse said, giving the city a total of 155,000 gallon storage capacity.

Pittsburgh-Des Moines is the same firm which erected the original water tank at Campbell in 1911.

Timely Tips

BLOOMFIELD -- "A home should be planned to provide a background for the personalities living in it," says Mrs. Fredericka Plummber, Home Management, Area Home Economist.

Are you still seeking ways to Re-Do the house where you now live, that it may reflect your way of life?

The Stoddard County University Extension Center is sponsoring a short course -- "Home Design -- Re-Think and Re - Do." The classes are especially designed to help homemakers to develop an awareness of good design possibilities in their own home. This awareness comes as a knowledge of design elements (space, form, texture and pattern, and color) and principles are learned. "Design in the home must serve two purposes -- function and beauty --" says Mrs. Plummer.

Beginning Thursday July 22, and continuing each Thursday until August 12, Mrs. Plummer will be teaching different topics of home design.

July 22 -- Design in the Home -- July 29 -- What's New in Floor Coverings?

August 5 -- Up Date Your Window Treatment, and August 12 -- Make Light Work for You.

Any homemaker may enroll in all of the classes or attend only the one that she feels will be helpful to her. July 15, has been set as closing date for enrollments. Enrollment should be sent or brought to the University Extension Center. Enrollment blanks may be obtained from the University Extension Center at Bloomfield or from any Home Economics Club President. A $1.00 registration fee or 25¢ per lesson will be collected at the meeting to cover cost of material to be used in the classes.

St. Joan of Arc was burned at the stake on May 30, 1431, in the Vieux Marche in Rouen, Normandy, the Magazine of Catholic Living states.

Count Basie Is Durable

HOLLYWOOD -- The band played with the same insinuating style, punctuated by harmonic chords on the piano. But something new had been added: a slightly rolling beat reminiscent of the Beatles.

The great Count Basie was leading his band through a recording session at MGM Studios. The number was titled "Skol, Sister," and its faintly rock 'n' roll style was in honor of Ann-Margret, who digs such jive. She is the star of "Made in Paris," in which the Basie band is appearing.

Jazz purists might be aghast at such adulteration of the Basie style, but the pianist-leader himself has no qualms about it.

"If I con't beat 'em, I'll join 'em," he grinned.

That doesn't mean that the Basie band is going to add electric guitars. The count merely believes in keeping up with the times. Such an attitude has helped keep him in the forefront of the band business for 30 years.

Basie will be 61 in August, but he shows no signs of slowing his pace of travel, which amounts to 10 months on the road each year. I noted that members of his present band seemed youthful.

"Yes, I like to have young players in the band," he remarked. "That keeps me up in my work; I don't get a chance to feel old."

The variety of audiences helps maintain his youthful attitude, too.

The count's business remains good, his being one of the few classic bands to maintain a continuity from the 1930s to today. Besides the usual dance dates, he has had great success with concerts, both as a single attraction and as support for such singers as Tony Bennett and Frank Sinatra. He is playing a half-dozen dates with Sinatra this month.

Missouri Leads In Rise Of Income

JEFFERSON CITY--The Missouri State Chamber of Commerce announces that Missouri leads the midwest plains states in per capita personal income percentage increase between 1960 and 1964. The chamberlin: pointing out the latest report of President Johnson's council of economic advisors, cited the government statistics, which indicated a 17.8 per cent increase in per capita personal income.

Col. C. R. Stribling, president of the Chamber, said that "although the benefits of our national prosperity have been shared in all parts of the Nation, Missouri was certainly above the national average and ranked in a 10th place tie with Michigan nationally."

Colonel Stribling also pointed out that the government's council based its conclusion on findings that from 1960 to 1964 the average income per person for the whole country rose $330 or 15 per cent, crossing the $2,500 mark. He noted further that, "Missouri's per capita personal income jumped from $2,203 in 1960 to $2,595 in 1964 which takes it beyond the national average."

Packaging Takes Special Machinery

NEW YORK -- It takes some pretty sophisticated machinery to package some of today's sophisticated products -- such as convenience foods, push button toilet articles, or oral contraceptives.

With a few exceptions makers of this packaging machinery are specialized and therefore small as U. S. corporations go. They work closely with the sponsors of new products to devise the machinery needed to package them so they can be transported, displayed -- and successfully moved into consumer hands.

You don't see the machines but do see their handiwork in drug stores, supermarkets and other retail outlets across the nation.

Some members of the Packaging Machinery Manufacturers Institute will tell you that many of today's familiar items would never have reached the public without the discovery of the proper machinery to make the exact, and popular, package.

Even so, the institute president, Eugene E. Lakso, says that the entire industry now boasts only $400 million a year in annual sales. But, he quickly adds, it is growing fast.

Some of the machiner is highly complicated, sort of little brother to computers.

One big corporation with a division in the business is Eastman Kodak of Rochester, N. Y. It has developed a device to pluck a product from one machine while using another to take tiny pellets of raw material loaded in a hopper. It breaks these pellets down, spins them into a packaging material to fit exactly the contour of the product in a few seconds.

Eastman says the package is waterproof, airtight, and keeps the product from spoiling and contamination. The contour package also saves space, time and expense in handling.

Lakso's firm, the Lakso Company of Fitchburg, Mass., is one of several making machinery for sequential packaging of drug products. This process weighs materials for accurate dosage and packages the product individually.

In the field of oral contraceptives, the machines stamp numbers on the pills so that the user has a constant check against error. Now being tested is a machine that will take varying sizes of pills, insert and number them in proper sequence, wrap them in different colored materials as a further prevention of error.

Drug manufacturers also use machines, such as made by the New Jersey Machine Corporation of Hoboken, N. J., which electronically read the labels of raw materials and also scan labels on the finished products to correct errors.

Fugitive On FBI List

WASHINGTON -- Robert Allen Woodford, a convicted California armed robber and alleged bank bandit, has been added to the FBI's list of "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives."

Woodford was inadvertently released from custody in San Francisco Dec. 14, after withdrawal of a federal indictment for a San Jose, Calif., bank robbery. Instead of being returned to a California prison where he had been serving an armed robbery sentence, Woodford was set free and 17 days later allegedly robbed a San Francisco bank of $2,280.

The confusing escapades of Woodford in the robbery field began on Oct. 14, 1963, when he participated with his brother in an armed robbery of a San Jose, Calif. market.

Then, on the afternoon of Jan. 16, 1964, he allegedly robbed, while armed with a pistol, the main branch of the First National Bank of San Jose, escaping with $1,222.

In May, 1964, Woodford was arrested in Salem, Ore. and returned to San Jose for prosecution on the market robbery charge. He pleaded guilty to this charge in July, 1964, received a five years' to life sentence and was confined at the California Medical Facility at Vacaville, Calif.

The San Jose bank robbery charge was still pending and, in August, 1964, he was indicted for this offense by a federal grand jury. In September, 1964, Woodford was brought from the Vacaville prison to U. S. district court in San Francisco, where the bank robbery charge was dismissed in December, 1964, due to the market robbery sentence he had been previously given by the California court. On Dec. 14, he was inadvertently released.

On Dec. 31, the Market-Geary branch of the Bank of America in San Francisco was robbed by a lone gunman of $2,280. Woodford has been identified as the alleged bank robber.

In addition to the criminal activity previously mentioned, Woodford has been convicted of vagrancy, burglary and assault with a deadly weapon and has been incarcerated in Oregon as well as in California. He has also received treatment in mental hospitals and has been described as having a violent temper with antisocial tendencies.

Woodford is a white American who was born at Warrenton, Ore. March 4, 1939. He is five feet, eight inches tall, weighs 140 to 150 pounds, has brown hair, hazel eyes, medium complexion and medium build. He has scars on the middle and index fingers of his right hand, one on his left index finger and a hernia scar on the left side of his abdomen.

He has been employed as a factory worker, farm worker and truck driver but reportedly abhors strenuous work and does not like to get dirty.

Woodford is said to drink beer, wine, whiskey and vodka moderately, to like spaghetti and Spanish foods, to be a neat and fastidious dresser, fond of expensive sport clothes, and to enjoy frequenting bowling alleys. He reportedly dislikes air travel, preferring automobile transportation.

This fugitive is known to regularly exercise with weights and to be interested in gymnastics. He has a reputation of molesting young girls.

He should be considered armed and extremely dangerous.

Should any person receive information concerning the whereabouts of Woodford, he is requested to immediately notify the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be located on the first page of local telephone directories.

Below Normal Outlook

PORTAGEVILLE -- Near to a little below normal conditions are expected during July in regard to temperatures as well as precipitation. Bear in mind that this applies to the Missouri Bootheel as a whole, and not to a particular farm. In other words, precipitation that does fall will be associated with showers and thundershowers that will be scattered when they do develop. Some areas will receive locally heavy downpours while others may be skipped most of the time.

Similar weather was noted over the Bootheel in June when several areas were so wet that fields could not be entered to carry on weed and grass controls. In other sections crops were showing decided moisture stress by the end of the month. Reports from weather bureau agricultural weather stations show the following rainfall totals for June: Caruthersville, 2.31 inches; Malden, 3.61 inches; Sikeston, 2.00 inches; Kennett, 4.72 inches; Poplar Bluff, 3.91 inches and Delta Center 2.23 inches.

In sections of Mississippi county unofficial reports tell of more than four inches falling within a two-hour period of thunderstorms.

Normal rainfall for July at selected cities are: Caruthersville, 3.56 inches; Morehouse, 2.86 inches; Parma, 3.45 inches; Poplar Bluff, 3.33 inches; Dexter, 3.22 inches; Fisk, 3.29 inches; New Madrid, 3.79 inches and Sikeston 3.12 inches.

Short term averages: Charleston, 3.26 inches; Portageville, 3.14 inches; Malden, 3.52 inches and Kennett 3.18 inches.

Expected pressure patterns over the United States include high pressure extending across the south, allowing less than normal moisture to move into the mid-south from the Gulf of Mexico. Highs crossing the nation will follow a track close to the Canadian border through the Great Lakes region. Cold fronts associated with some of these systems will penetrate southward far enough to touch off occasional thundershowers and provide breaks in the hot weather. Other thundershowers will develop in the warm air that follows cooling periods. These are likely to wet some sections of the Bootheel on 7 to 10 days of the month.

Biggest weather problems will be associated with unreliable and poorly distributed rainfall. Supplemental irrigation is going to be needed just as it was in June. Some insect problems will be heightened by dry weather, County extension directors may be contacted for advice in controlling such yield robbers as spider mites and bollworms.

The occasional breaks in hot, southwesterly flow will also provide an interruption of persistent, troublesome winds that kept a number of fishermen off the water during June. Warm temperatures and plenty of sunny weather means lots of activity on Bootheel rivers and lakes. Swimmers, water skiers and fishermen should need no reminder to keep off the water during thunderstorms. Plan to head for shore well ahead of approaching storms that are well advertised by tall, billowing dark clouds.

Last week when I had occasion to return to the office late one evening, I met one of the cleaning women in the hall. I stopped to chat with her for a moment, and in the course of our conversation I remarked that I was out of cigarettes and had better go back out and buy some before beginning my work. The cleaning woman told me that her oldest son was helping her and that he'd be glad to do the errand.

"Your oldest son!" I said, surprised. "Why, Jennie, I thought you were an old maid!"

"I am," Jennie replied with great dignity. "But I ain't a fussy old maid!" — P. F. Calkin

Find Diary Of Adams

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. AP -- A youthful John Adams, pondering his future, exulting in his studies and pining for fair Orlinda, is revealed in a hitherto unknown diary.

Discovery of the manuscript, the earliest known diary of the man who became the second president of the United States, was announced today by L. H. Butterfield, editor-in-chief of the Adams papers, a 100-volume project to collect all documents of the famous family.

The diary was found at the Vermont Historical Society, Montpelier, Vt., among the papers of Royall Tyler, a Vermont judge and writer who once courted Adams' daughter Abigail.

Covering the years 1753 to 1758 when Adams was in his late teens and early twenties, the diary gives many of Adams' impressions of life as a student at Harvard and later as a teacher and law student in Worchester and as a young lawyer in Braintree.

Adams' thoughts were not always on his studies; he wrote in a draft of a letter to an unidentified friend:

"If I look upon a law book and labor to exert all my attention, my eyes tis true are on the book, but imagination is at a tea table with Orlinda, seeing that face, those eyes, that shape, that familiar friendly look and hearing sense divine come . . . from her tongue."

But the attractive Orlinda was not further identified. In any case, Adams at age 29 married Abigail Smith, the daughter of a minister in Weymouth, the next town to his native Braintree.

Another entry, believed to have been written in 1758, asks, "What are the motives that ought to urge me to hard study?

"The desire of fame, fortune and personal pleasure.

"A critical knowledge of the Greek and Roman and French poetry, history and oratory, a thorough comprehensive knowledge of natural, civil, commercial and province law, will draw upon me the esteem and perhaps admiration tho possibly the envy too of the judges of both courts, or the lawyers and of juries, who will spread my fame thro the province, will draw around me a swarm of clients who will furnish me with a plentiful provision for my own support, and for the increase of my fortune. . . I shall be able to defend innocence, to punish guilt and to promote truth and justice among mankind."

Wendell D. Garrett, an associate editor of the Adams papers at the Massachusetts Historical Society, found the diary while looking through the Tyler papers for possible love letters from Adams' daughter to Tyler.

Garrett spotted the document which bore no name but was in Adams' small, cramped handwriting.

Historians are deciphering and editing the 28-page document, preparing it for publication by the Belknap Press of Harvard University Press.

A recent report says the American female spends 65 percent of what the American male earns. Let's see, now. That means she has to charge the other 35 percent. — Changing Times

DROP OUT?

Very unlikely. The successful newspaperboy is at opposite poles from the quitter by the very fact of having a newspaper route.

His experience shows him that the rewards for the goof-off are slim; that there's no room for the quitter and that the laurels of life go to the person able to meet challenges. He's found that initiative pays big dividends and there is no substitute for learning to deal with people.

Guided by men who are trained to work with boys he develops responsible attitudes, and for the first time, money becomes more than a hand-out. Nothing can replace the satisfaction of purchasing with money he's earned on his own.

You would be surprised to know how many of today's leaders built their success stories on a newspaperboy foundation.

Reports from weather bureau agricultural weather stations show the following rainfall totals for June: Caruthersville, 2.31 inches; Malden, 3.61 inches; Sikeston, 2.00 inches; Kennett, 4.72 inches; Poplar Bluff, 3.91 inches and Delta Center 2.23 inches.

In sections of Mississippi county unofficial reports tell of more than four inches falling within a two-hour period of thunderstorms.

Normal rainfall for July at selected cities are: Caruthersville, 3.56 inches; Morehouse, 2.86 inches; Parma, 3.45 inches; Poplar Bluff, 3.33 inches; Dexter, 3.22 inches; Fisk, 3.29 inches; New Madrid, 3.79 inches and Sikeston 3.12 inches.

Short term averages: Charleston, 3.26 inches; Portageville, 3.14 inches; Malden, 3.52 inches and Kennett 3.18 inches.

Expected pressure patterns over the United States include high pressure extending across the south, allowing less than normal moisture to move into the mid-south from the Gulf of Mexico. Highs crossing the nation will follow a track close to the Canadian border through the Great Lakes region. Cold fronts associated with some of these systems will penetrate southward far enough to touch off occasional thundershowers and provide breaks in the hot weather. Other thundershowers will develop in the warm air that follows cooling periods. These are likely to wet some sections of the Bootheel on 7 to 10 days of the month.

Biggest weather problems will be associated with unreliable and poorly distributed rainfall. Supplemental irrigation is going to be needed just as it was in June. Some insect problems will be heightened by dry weather, County extension directors may be contacted for advice in controlling such yield robbers as spider mites and bollworms.

The occasional breaks in hot, southwesterly flow will also provide an interruption of persistent, troublesome winds that kept a number of fishermen off the water during June. Warm temperatures and plenty of sunny weather means lots of activity on Bootheel rivers and lakes. Swimmers, water skiers and fishermen should need no reminder to keep off the water during thunderstorms. Plan to head for shore well ahead of approaching storms that are well advertised by tall, billowing dark clouds.

SLATTERY'S GAL—Kathie Browne, heroine of many television westerns, becomes the steady girl of Jim (he has a first name now) Slattery of Slattery's People on CBS-TV. Says Kathie: "I couldn't do a love scene and call the man 'Slattery'." So now, it's Jim.

Last week when I had occasion to return to the office late one evening, I met one of the cleaning women in the hall. I stopped to chat with her for a moment, and in the course of our conversation I remarked that I was out of cigarettes and had better go back out and buy some before beginning my work. The cleaning woman told me that her oldest son was helping her and that he'd be glad to do the errand.

"Your oldest son!" I said, surprised. "Why, Jennie, I thought you were an old maid!"

"I am," Jennie replied with great dignity. "But I ain't a fussy old maid!" — P. F. Calkin

DROP OUT?

Very unlikely. The successful newspaperboy is at opposite poles from the quitter by the very fact of having a newspaper route.

His experience shows him that the rewards for the goof-off are slim; that there's no room for the quitter and that the laurels of life go to the person able to meet challenges. He's found that initiative pays big dividends and there is no substitute for learning to deal with people.

Guided by men who are trained to work with boys he develops responsible attitudes, and for the first time, money becomes more than a hand-out. Nothing can replace the satisfaction of purchasing with money he's earned on his own.

You would be surprised to know how many of today's leaders built their success stories on a newspaperboy foundation.

Find Diary Of Adams

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. AP -- A youthful John Adams, pondering his future, exulting in his studies and pining for fair Orlinda, is revealed in a hitherto unknown diary.

Discovery of the manuscript, the earliest known diary of the man who became the second president of the United States, was announced today by L. H. Butterfield, editor-in-chief of the Adams papers, a 100-volume project to collect all documents of the famous family.

The diary was found at the Vermont Historical Society, Montpelier, Vt., among the papers of Royall Tyler, a Vermont judge and writer who once courted Adams' daughter Abigail.

Covering the years 1753 to 1758 when Adams was in his late teens and early twenties, the diary gives many of Adams' impressions of life as a student at Harvard and later as a teacher and law student in Worchester and as a young lawyer in Braintree.

Adams' thoughts were not always on his studies; he wrote in a draft of a letter to an unidentified friend:

"If I look upon a law book and labor to exert all my attention, my eyes tis true are on the book, but imagination is at a tea table with Orlinda, seeing that face, those eyes, that shape, that familiar friendly look and hearing sense divine come . . . from her tongue."

But the attractive Orlinda was not further identified. In any case, Adams at age 29 married Abigail Smith, the daughter of a minister in Weymouth, the next town to his native Braintree.

Another entry, believed to have been written in 1758, asks, "What are the motives that ought to urge me to hard study?

"The desire of fame, fortune and personal pleasure.

"A critical knowledge of the Greek and Roman and French poetry, history and oratory, a thorough comprehensive knowledge of natural, civil, commercial and province law, will draw upon me the esteem and perhaps admiration tho possibly the envy too of the judges of both courts, or the lawyers and of juries, who will spread my fame thro the province, will draw around me a swarm of clients who will furnish me with a plentiful provision for my own support, and for the increase of my fortune. . . I shall be able to defend innocence, to punish guilt and to promote truth and justice among mankind."

Wendell D. Garrett, an associate editor of the Adams papers at the Massachusetts Historical Society, found the diary while looking through the Tyler papers for possible love letters from Adams' daughter to Tyler.

Garrett spotted the document which bore no name but was in Adams' small, cramped handwriting.

Historians are deciphering and editing the 28-page document, preparing it for publication by the Belknap Press of Harvard University Press.

Looking Back Over The Years

50 years ago

Morehouse -- Miss Myrtle McFarling entertained a crowd of boys and girls at her home Friday evening.

Dr. L. O. Rodes has resigned from the Board of Health of Sikeston. The town is now without a physician on this very necessary board, Dr. P. M. Malcolm having resigned some time back.

According to Fred L. Schorle of the Sikeston Band, the local band organization now has on hand for the purpose of buying new uniforms approximately $100. A total of $100 more will be needed, it is said, to complete the fund.

Decker's Barber Shop has been redecorated the past week and added facilities for improved service are contemplated.

Berthe & Wilcox, Charleston and St. Louis engineers, were selected by the Sikeston city council Monday evening to draw plans and submit estimates of cost of a sanitary sewer system for this city.

Sikeston was made sad early yesterday morning when it was learned that life had left the body of Mrs. Frances A. Tanner. Mrs. Tanner, who would have been 87 years of age this fall, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Anna T. Winchester, on Tanner street.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. McCord and children will leave today for a few days' visit with relatives at Veedersburg, Oxford and Danville, Ind.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wilbur celebrated their 38th wedding anniversary June 27, with a family dinner, their five children and four grandchildren being present.

Robert D. Mow and family are now living in their new home on North New Madrid street, having moved Monday. Leo Smith and family are now occupying the house vacated by Mr. Mow and family.

Harold Pitman, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Pitman, is now recovering from painful injuries which he suffered in two automobile accidents near West Plains Sunday night. He sustained a fractured collarbone and cuts on his legs, face and arms. The first accident happened as Mr. and Mrs. Pitman were returning with another couple from a spring near West Plains after a swimming party and picnic supper. As they traveled a supplementary route their car left the road and turned over in a ditch. The machine was righted and the couples drove on toward home. At a point 10 miles from West Plain, however, the automobile again left the road. It was in this second accident that Mr. Pitman received his injuries.

Sikeston's Legion Junior Baseball team, which has acquired the winning habit this summer, celebrated the Fourth yesterday afternoon by defeating its strongest opponent, the Cape Girardeau Legion Juniors, on their home field. The score was 7 to 4.

A message from the War Department received Tuesday night by Mrs. Jean Waldman, stated that her husband, Harry L. Waldman, T/5 with the U. S. Army, died of wounds on Okinawa May 23.

Sgt. Frank Alexiou, former resident of Sikeston, died on Luzon Island July 1 as the result of injuries sustained in a vehicle accident, the War Department has notified his wife, the former Miss Mildred Hufstedler of Sikeston.

PRAYER

For Today From The Upper Room

If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed. (John 8:36)

PRAYER: O God, we are grateful for the freedom which we have in Christ, the great liberator of all who will trust in Him. Strengthen us in our faithfulness to Thee, through Him, who is our Savior. Amen.

Today's Spanish Lesson

SPEED SPANISH GOES INTO FINAL WEEK

Three. .two. . one. .zero!

The countdown has started on applying for William Archer's unique Spanish SPEED SPEECH course. Friday is the deadline for sending in your application to receive this easy method of learning the Spanish language. Why not devote 24 hours of sincere study to learning a new language? The time to start is now. You'll be glad you took the easy road to Spanish, instead of employing the conventional method of tedious, tiresome verb conjugations.

William Archer was always a diligent student of Spanish, however, when he and his family moved to Mexico, he found that he could not converse with the natives. This complete inability to communicate properly was the inspiration for the creation of Spanish SPEED SPEECH. This amazing course teaches you to speak and think in Spanish in the same way that a child does. The child learns to express wants and needs by speaking long before he learns what the present tense of a verb is -- so it is with SPEED SPEECH.

Spanish SPEED SPEECH is available only through The Daily Standard. Since it is being offered as a public service to our readers, we are able to give you the entire $14.85 course, which includes textbook, two 45 RPM records, and dictionary, for only $9.12. Cotton Fields Grass Free In Bootheel

HAYTI -- Missouri cotton fields are free of grass and are in a good state of cultivation. Moisture is adequate. Plants put on squares and made satisfactory growth. Blooms were observed in northern Pemiscot County. The farm labor supply continued plentiful. Wages ranged mostly from $6. to $8.50 per day.

Cotton plants fruited satisfactorily in most localities of the south central region, according to the Consumer and Marketing Service, U. S. D. A. Younger fields are putting on squares and show good potential. Beneficial showers were received in many localities during the week. Insects were generally held under control with the use of insecticide programs. Farmers are busy staying ahead of the weeds and grass and most fields are reported clean.

Spot cotton trading remained slow. Sales decreased from a week earlier. Prices were fairly steady. Farmers netted about $2.00 per bale for their equities. Demand was largely for Middling and lower grades, and supply of cotton was generally dominated by CCC loan equities and government stock cotton.

Domestic mill demand for prompt shipment was fairly good. Some interest was expressed for forward months; however, prices bid tended to restrict trading.

Foreign mill inquiries were about unchanged from a week earlier. Inquiries were mostly for the higher grades of new-crop cotton for forward delivery. Interest was shown by mills in the Far East, Near East and Europe.

Big news for telephone users:

Reduction of excise tax means lower telephone bills for Missouri customers

Effective January 1, 1966, the Federal Excise Tax on telephone service will be reduced from 10 to 3 per cent. Following the initial drop, the tax will be lowered 1 per cent each year until it is eliminated in 1969.

Telephone users will receive the full cash benefit from this tax reduction. The tax, which is levied directly on those who use telephone service, has been included on monthly telephone bills, and each month your tax payment has been sent on to the federal government. In effect, the telephone company has been a collection agency. Telephone bills, beginning in January, will be reduced to reflect the 7 per cent decrease.

When the excise tax is eliminated in 1969, telephone users in Missouri will save more than $22 million annually. This will mean about $2 million a month added to Missourians' spendable income.

Harold Pitman, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Pitman, is now recovering from painful injuries which he suffered in two automobile accidents near West Plains Sunday night. He sustained a fractured collarbone and cuts on his legs, face and arms. The first accident happened as Mr. and Mrs. Pitman were returning with another couple from a spring near West Plains after a swimming party and picnic supper. As they traveled a supplementary route their car left the road and turned over in a ditch. The machine was righted and the couples drove on toward home. At a point 10 miles from West Plain, however, the automobile again left the road. It was in this second accident that Mr. Pitman received his injuries.

Today's Spanish Lesson

SPEED SPANISH GOES INTO FINAL WEEK

Three. .two. . one. .zero!

The countdown has started on applying for William Archer's unique Spanish SPEED SPEECH course. Friday is the deadline for sending in your application to receive this easy method of learning the Spanish language. Why not devote 24 hours of sincere study to learning a new language? The time to start is now. You'll be glad you took the easy road to Spanish, instead of employing the conventional method of tedious, tiresome verb conjugations.

William Archer was always a diligent student of Spanish, however, when he and his family moved to Mexico, he found that he could not converse with the natives. This complete inability to communicate properly was the inspiration for the creation of Spanish SPEED SPEECH. This amazing course teaches you to speak and think in Spanish in the same way that a child does. The child learns to express wants and needs by speaking long before he learns what the present tense of a verb is -- so it is with SPEED SPEECH.

Spanish SPEED SPEECH is available only through The Daily Standard. Since it is being offered as a public service to our readers, we are able to give you the entire $14.85 course, which includes textbook, two 45 RPM records, and dictionary, for only $9.12. Spot cotton trading remained slow. Sales decreased from a week earlier. Prices were fairly steady. Farmers netted about $2.00 per bale for their equities. Demand was largely for Middling and lower grades, and supply of cotton was generally dominated by CCC loan equities and government stock cotton.

Domestic mill demand for prompt shipment was fairly good. Some interest was expressed for forward months; however, prices bid tended to restrict trading.

Foreign mill inquiries were about unchanged from a week earlier. Inquiries were mostly for the higher grades of new-crop cotton for forward delivery. Interest was shown by mills in the Far East, Near East and Europe.

Big news for telephone users:

Reduction of excise tax means lower telephone bills for Missouri customers

Effective January 1, 1966, the Federal Excise Tax on telephone service will be reduced from 10 to 3 per cent. Following the initial drop, the tax will be lowered 1 per cent each year until it is eliminated in 1969.

Telephone users will receive the full cash benefit from this tax reduction. The tax, which is levied directly on those who use telephone service, has been included on monthly telephone bills, and each month your tax payment has been sent on to the federal government. In effect, the telephone company has been a collection agency. Telephone bills, beginning in January, will be reduced to reflect the 7 per cent decrease.

When the excise tax is eliminated in 1969, telephone users in Missouri will save more than $22 million annually. This will mean about $2 million a month added to Missourians' spendable income.

When I Was A Boy

As compiled by Ralph Gregory, Curator of the Mark Twain Shrine, Florida, from the writings of the founder of the Appeal, B. F. "Pappy" Blanton, in 1919-20. A contemporary of Mark Twain, "Pappy" Blanton wrote of the times and customs that were so dear to Twain, and about which Twain wrote so many interesting and humorous anecdotes. (Verbatim copy, with some questions and guesses as to missing words)

B. F. "Pappy" Blanton

August 15, 1919

When I was a boy Negroes were not permitted to leave their homes without a pass from their owner. There were 'patrollers' whose business it was to whip any Negro caught away from home without a pass, and was paid for each one whipped. However, this did not prevent young Negro men from going visiting at night, for the white children often wrote passes for them, and I have scribbled passes before I could write, the Negro saying that while the patrol was trying to make out what was on the paper he could make his escape and he always did -- except at one time when two patrol officers were together. I now know that patrolling was a brutal custom and none but the toughest white men would take the place.

When I was a boy I never heard of a pair of socks or stockings being bought by anybody in the country. All the socks and stockings for both master and slave were knitted at home out of home made yarn that had been carded and spun right on the premises. And most of the shoes and boots were made at home also. Life was not a dream back in the country when I was a boy, but there was one blessed thing about living then and that was that nearly everybody was happy and contented with their lot and willing to extend the helping hand to anyone in need. Nobody had much money, neither did they need much as taxes were almost nothing and about all one had to buy was coffee and sugar, a little calico and domestic, and occasionally a little tea. People lived off the farm and lived well.

When I was a boy many farmers gathered their corn and threw it in a huge pile along side of the crib, usually under a shed. Then when it was all gathered invitations were sent out inviting the neighbors to a corn shucking. Uusally the shuckers were Negroes who paired off, dividing the pile of corn, chose captains and the fun commenced. One man would sing by himself but all the men would join in the chorus. It was better than a modern concert and Caruso was not much ahead of some of those Negro singers. There was always plenty of liquor refreshments and at midnight the men marched to the houses, generally carrying the owners on their shoulders, where they were served with all they could eat of the very best the country could furnish. Such a feast would cost a dollar and a half a plate now. We will never see such happy days again, as the people are money mad.

When I was a boy about ten years of age an old man named Hatwood, everybody called him "Old Hatawood," roved through the country at will. He was the dirtiest man I have ever seen and was idiotic, but harmless. He sometimes got pretty drunk and, of course, was more idiotic then than he was before, as most men were when drunk. Old Hatwood had no home that I ever heard of, but just went from house to house to get a bite to eat and his appearance generally caused the kids to hide out or stay mighty close to their mammas. Nowadays such a character would be sent to the poor house or infirmary as we now call them, but if there was such a place then I never knew it. What became of the poor old derilect no one seemed to know. We have more to be thankful for now than ever before as we have all the comforts that were denied the people when I was a boy.

When I was a boy I knew a good old woman who, with her family, had come out of Kentucky. Some seasons had been awfully wet, some had been dreadfully dry, some had been extremely cold and some seasons awfully hot, so, not being very well pleased with the country and her surroundings she longed to return to her beloved Kentucky. So she broached the subject to her husband in this way: "This is the hottest and the coldest, the wettest and the dryest and the hell damndest country in the world, and I want to go back home." But they did not go back and some of her descendants now are honored citizens of Howard county. While I was still a boy this good lady while drying apples, fell from a shed and broke both her arms, poor thing.

When I was a boy my grandfather owned perhaps the largest orchard in the county, about ten acres, which is not much of an orchard these days. He also had a small nursery in which all the best varieties of apples were cultivated. I remember well that men drove all the way from upper Missouri and Southern Iowa to buy apples for which they paid 50 cents a bushel. In the fall the cider mill would be started and many barreis of cider was made and sold in Glasgow. The little white boys and little Negro boys had to pick up the apples and carry them to the cider mill and as there seemed to be millions of yellow jackets with sharp stingers, and we were all in our long shirt tails, the yellow jackets made it mighty lively for us at times, but we were happy just the same.

When I was a boy there were many customs that are now obsolete. One of them was the use of hair oil which was in common use by both men and women, especially among the young men and the young women. When a young fellow wanted to call on his best girl he greased his hair with bear's oil, highly scented with perfume, got out his Sunday boots, gave they a good greasing with tallow, put on a stiff pleated bosom white shirt and his suit of mixed jeans clothes and went a wooing a girl that used as much hair oil as he did, but of a finer quality. Now these young people were just as good, honest and upright youngsters as can be found anywhere now and smelt a great deal better than many of the young swains you meet now.

When I was a boy of 8 or 9 years of age an incident occurred in my life that has always caused me to make excuses for the short comings of children. The incident was this: There had been a party or a wedding at our house and next morning I was sent with a small cake to a Mrs. Woods, one of our wealthy neighbors. I started in good faith, but on the road I got to pinching bites off the edges of the cake and when I finally looked at the cake it was so ragged on the edges that I was ashamed to take it to the lady, so I sat down ate all I could and stuffed the balance in a hollow log. One wrong leads to another, so I told that Mrs. Woods thought the cake mighty fine. Now, I never thought of doing wrong and I know from my experience that children do things without thinking of the wrong, so all my life I have looked over the faults of kids and loved them all and hope to die still loving them all.

When I was a boy there were thrills that came to a country boy that few boys now know anything about. For instance in winter time every boy in the country knew how to make a trap in which to catch a partridge. We had never head of the word "quail" then where I lived. To a red-blooded boy nothing could stir his blood quicker than to visit his trap and see it almost full of the pretty birds. The lad may have been pretty cold when he got to his trap but the sight of the trap full of birds caused his blood to flow so fast that he was so warm that he would throw off his gloves and get busy taking out the birds.

U.S. Troops Join Fighters

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP --More than 1,000 American troops joined Vietnamese and Australian forces today for their second combined operation against the Viet Cong. Like the first such operation, there was no significant contact with the enemy, a U.S. spokesman reported.

Fighting was bloodier elsewhere. A U. S. spokesman said two Americans and 26 Vietnamese mountain troops were missing and four Vietnamese were killed in mountainous Pleiku Province, 215 miles northeast of Saigon.

About 2,500 troops were involved in the combined operation, including two battalions of U. S. paratroopers from the 173rd Airborne Brigade, one battalion of the Royal Australian Regiment, and two Vietnamese army battalions.

Long Defends Electric Co-ops

EL DORADO SPRINGS, Mo. AP -- Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., said today the Federal Power Commission is "totally mistaken and misguided when it tries to extend its jurisdiction over the rural electric cooperatives."

Addressing the annual meeting of the Sac Osage Electric Cooperative here, he said "Congress has no intention of letting FPC meddle in the affairs of the co-ops."

Citing the progress of the Rural Electric Power Administration Senator Long said in 1935 about one in every 15 Missouri farms was receiving electric service. The first financed REA line went into operation in August, 1937, he said, and now "better than 98 out of every 100 farms in our state are receiving electric service."

He said the Senate Commerce Commission recently approved legislation that declares co-operatives are outside the jurisdiction of the FPC.

"We will make every effort to gain final passage and enactment into law in this session of Congress," he said.

When I Was A Boy

B. F. "Pappy" Blanton

As compiled by Ralph Gregory, Curator of the Mark Twain Shrine, Florida, from the writings of the founder of the Appeal, B. F. "Pappy" Blanton, in 1919-20. A contemporary of Mark Twain, "Pappy" Blanton wrote of the times and customs that were so dear to Twain, and about which Twain wrote so many interesting and humorous anecdotes. (Verbatim copy, with some questions and guesses as to missing words)

August 15, 1919

When I was a boy Negroes were not permitted to leave their homes without a pass from their owner. There were 'patrollers' whose business it was to whip any Negro caught away from home without a pass, and was paid for each one whipped. However, this did not prevent young Negro men from going visiting at night, for the white children often wrote passes for them, and I have scribbled passes before I could write, the Negro saying that while the patrol was trying to make out what was on the paper he could make his escape and he always did -- except at one time when two patrol officers were together. I now know that patrolling was a brutal custom and none but the toughest white men would take the place.

When I was a boy I never heard of a pair of socks or stockings being bought by anybody in the country. All the socks and stockings for both master and slave were knitted at home out of home made yarn that had been carded and spun right on the premises. And most of the shoes and boots were made at home also. Life was not a dream back in the country when I was a boy, but there was one blessed thing about living then and that was that nearly everybody was happy and contented with their lot and willing to extend the helping hand to anyone in need. Nobody had much money, neither did they need much as taxes were almost nothing and about all one had to buy was coffee and sugar, a little calico and domestic, and occasionally a little tea. People lived off the farm and lived well.

When I was a boy many farmers gathered their corn and threw it in a huge pile along side of the crib, usually under a shed. Then when it was all gathered invitations were sent out inviting the neighbors to a corn shucking. Uusally the shuckers were Negroes who paired off, dividing the pile of corn, chose captains and the fun commenced. One man would sing by himself but all the men would join in the chorus. It was better than a modern concert and Caruso was not much ahead of some of those Negro singers. There was always plenty of liquor refreshments and at midnight the men marched to the houses, generally carrying the owners on their shoulders, where they were served with all they could eat of the very best the country could furnish. Such a feast would cost a dollar and a half a plate now. We will never see such happy days again, as the people are money mad.

When I was a boy about ten years of age an old man named Hatwood, everybody called him "Old Hatawood," roved through the country at will. He was the dirtiest man I have ever seen and was idiotic, but harmless. He sometimes got pretty drunk and, of course, was more idiotic then than he was before, as most men were when drunk. Old Hatwood had no home that I ever heard of, but just went from house to house to get a bite to eat and his appearance generally caused the kids to hide out or stay mighty close to their mammas. Nowadays such a character would be sent to the poor house or infirmary as we now call them, but if there was such a place then I never knew it. What became of the poor old derilect no one seemed to know. We have more to be thankful for now than ever before as we have all the comforts that were denied the people when I was a boy.

When I was a boy I knew a good old woman who, with her family, had come out of Kentucky. Some seasons had been awfully wet, some had been dreadfully dry, some had been extremely cold and some seasons awfully hot, so, not being very well pleased with the country and her surroundings she longed to return to her beloved Kentucky. So she broached the subject to her husband in this way: "This is the hottest and the coldest, the wettest and the dryest and the hell damndest country in the world, and I want to go back home." But they did not go back and some of her descendants now are honored citizens of Howard county. While I was still a boy this good lady while drying apples, fell from a shed and broke both her arms, poor thing.

When I was a boy my grandfather owned perhaps the largest orchard in the county, about ten acres, which is not much of an orchard these days. He also had a small nursery in which all the best varieties of apples were cultivated. I remember well that men drove all the way from upper Missouri and Southern Iowa to buy apples for which they paid 50 cents a bushel. In the fall the cider mill would be started and many barrels of cider was made and sold in Glasgow. The little white boys and little Negro boys had to pick up the apples and carry them to the cider mill and as there seemed to be millions of yellow jackets with sharp stingers, and we were all in our long shirt tails, the yellow jackets made it mighty lively for us at times, but we were happy just the same.

When I was a boy there were many customs that are now obsolete. One of them was the use of hair oil which was in common use by both men and women, especially among the young men and the young women. When a young fellow wanted to call on his best girl he greased his hair with bear's oil, highly scented with perfume, got out his Sunday boots, gave they a good greasing with tallow, put on a stiff pleated bosom white shirt and his suit of mixed jeans clothes and went a wooing a girl that used as much hair oil as he did, but of a finer quality. Now these young people were just as good, honest and upright youngsters as can be found anywhere now and smelt a great deal better than many of the young swains you meet now.

When I was a boy of 8 or 9 years of age an incident occurred in my life that has always caused me to make excuses for the short comings of children. The incident was this: There had been a party or a wedding at our house and next morning I was sent with a small cake to a Mrs. Woods, one of our wealthy neighbors. I started in good faith, but on the road I got to pinching bites off the edges of the cake and when I finally looked at the cake it was so ragged on the edges that I was ashamed to take it to the lady, so I sat down ate all I could and stuffed the balance in a hollow log. One wrong leads to another, so I told that Mrs. Woods thought the cake mighty fine. Now, I never thought of doing wrong and I know from my experience that children do things without thinking of the wrong, so all my life I have looked over the faults of kids and loved them all and hope to die still loving them all.

When I was a boy there were thrills that came to a country boy that few boys now know anything about. For instance in winter time every boy in the country knew how to make a trap in which to catch a partridge. We had never head of the word "quail" then where I lived. To a red-blooded boy nothing could stir his blood quicker than to visit his trap and see it almost full of the pretty birds. The lad may have been pretty cold when he got to his trap but the sight of the trap full of birds caused his blood to flow so fast that he was so warm that he would throw off his gloves and get busy taking out the birds.

U.S. Troops Join Fighters

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP --More than 1,000 American troops joined Vietnamese and Australian forces today for their second combined operation against the Viet Cong. Like the first such operation, there was no significant contact with the enemy, a U.S. spokesman reported.

Fighting was bloodier elsewhere. A U. S. spokesman said two Americans and 26 Vietnamese mountain troops were missing and four Vietnamese were killed in mountainous Pleiku Province, 215 miles northeast of Saigon.

About 2,500 troops were involved in the combined operation, including two battalions of U. S. paratroopers from the 173rd Airborne Brigade, one battalion of the Royal Australian Regiment, and two Vietnamese army battalions.

Long Defends Electric Co-ops

EL DORADO SPRINGS, Mo. AP -- Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., said today the Federal Power Commission is "totally mistaken and misguided when it tries to extend its jurisdiction over the rural electric cooperatives."

Addressing the annual meeting of the Sac Osage Electric Cooperative here, he said "Congress has no intention of letting FPC meddle in the affairs of the co-ops."

Citing the progress of the Rural Electric Power Administration Senator Long said in 1935 about one in every 15 Missouri farms was receiving electric service. The first financed REA line went into operation in August, 1937, he said, and now "better than 98 out of every 100 farms in our state are receiving electric service."

He said the Senate Commerce Commission recently approved legislation that declares co-operatives are outside the jurisdiction of the FPC.

"We will make every effort to gain final passage and enactment into law in this session of Congress," he said.

COMFORT
Driving cool is the obvious pleasure of air conditioning, but there are other gratifying advantages. Comfort is increased by driving with the windows up, thereby eliminating noise, dust, smog and pollen.

SAFETY
A comfortable driver is a more alert driver. This is particularly true on longer trips, where fatigue is hastened by physical discomfort and road noise. Air conditioning eliminates these hazards.

ECONOMY
ARA air conditioning costs very little to install. Operating and maintenance costs are negligible, and most units can be transferred to your next car. This reduction in gasoline mileage is minimal.
